Give up Fight in Dardanelles To Rush to Aid of Serbia Is Startling Rumor In London

Lord Milner Brings up Matter in House of Lords and Lord Lansdowne is Non-committal in Reply

London, Oct. 15.—Viscount Milner suggested in the House of Lords today that, in view of the need of all available troops on the western front, there was but one course for the allies to pursue, and that, he said, was to withdraw the 150,000 or 200,000 French and British soldiers from the Gallipoli Peninsula, give up the long drawn out campaign against the Dardanelles altogether, and transfer the men with all speed to the aid of Serbia, before that country is completely crushed by Germany.

A great explosion followed the striking of the torpedo and the destroyer foundered immediately.

ZEPPELIN RAID SENDS HUNDREDS INTO THE RANKS

Young Men Rush to Enlist After Latest Barbarous Attack on Non-Combatants

New York, Oct. 15.—The London correspondent of the Tribune cables under yesterday's date:

The zeppelin structures which, for a long time, have been the cause of so much anxiety to the Allies, have, in the last few days, necessarily prevented me from giving a comprehensive story of last night's Zeppelin raid over London, but it is possible to relate some of the incidents and one incident showing the futility of such forms of barbarous attack.

The official statement says: "The material damage was small. This is quite right, but nevertheless it is enough to congest the streets as they had not been since the early days of the war, to bring out thousands of recruits, and to send hundreds of young men into the ranks, and to make the city the busiest place in Europe."

In Berlin they say the raids are for military purposes and aim at "terrorizing London." Perhaps the German general staff is satisfied with the extent of military damage done by this raid, which killed fourteen soldiers, and terrified people are supposed to rush away in panic or hide in their homes.

HOW THE GERMANS WON BULGARIA OVER

Paris, Oct. 15.—That the Russian retreat, skillfully exploited by German agents, was the immediate cause of turning against the allies the sentiment of the Bulgarian people, who are intensely practical, was the assertion made by A. DePaulieu, French minister at Sofia, to the correspondent of the Journal at Plozeu.

"The event coincided," he said, "with the visit of the Duke of Mecklenburg, who found a ready tool in King Ferdinand, a blind believer in Germany's victory. The Champagne success came too late to restore the balance. The Bulgarian people understood nothing of diplomatic calculations. They see only Macedonia to be conquered. Certainly, if the Russian flag appeared at Varna or Burgas, it might rouse memories in their inmost souls, but interest comes before sentiment."

MRS. DUVAL AND MRS. CORBET HOME

Saddened by the loss of her soldier husband, Major Duval, M. D., and doubly grieved through his body being lost in the Hesperian disaster, Mrs. J. L. Duval returned to St. John at noon today. She was accompanied by her children, and her sister, Mrs. Corbet, wife of Major G. G. Corbet, M. D., who had gone across to England to comfort the sorrowing widow when the cables brought the distressing news of his death.

Mrs. Duval was met at the train today by many friends who extended sympathy, in which the citizens of St. John and other parts of Canada will join, for all have been touched by the pitiful experiences through which she has passed. She is bearing up bravely, largely for the sake of her children, and her only one source in her grief is the thought that the death of her husband was that of a hero, following wounds sustained while ministering to his comrades on the famous battlefield of Ypres.

Mrs. Corbet and Mrs. Duval came home on the steamer Metagama. While in England the former spent three days filled with happiness with her husband, Major Corbet, who had secured a six days' furlough from service at the front. Unfortunately her steamer was delayed by having to go out of her course because of submarines, and so their reunion was shortened to half the time anticipated. Her husband is keeping up well to the strain of duty at the front where he is medical officer with the artillery on the firing line and where he has been kept continually busy night and day.

"We in Canada," said Mrs. Corbet, "do not know there is a war, compared with the realization of the English people. A visit to London or any other centre in the British Isles will convince one of the stern reality of the dreadful war, but thought there are so many very sad sights, the people try to be and are very cheerful in the face of their grief. Recruiting is going on steadily and apparently very well, but the talk of conscription is daily growing stronger."

Italy's Report

Paris, Oct. 15.—While there is no doubt of Italian intervention in the Balkans, says the Petit Journal's Milan correspondent, the question now under consideration is how contact can be avoided between Italian and German contingents, if Italy's share in the campaign compels the use of land forces, which in the west, it has been made moderately warm.

Prior to this last illness though growing feebler all the time he had been able to move about the house and his fine days to sit out on the veranda of Miss Wilson's cottage and was able to read the papers during the day. His fall from the veranda, which he had been sitting on, was the cause of his death, but will be glad to know that his closing years were brightened by the sympathy of steadfast friends.
