Twenty Poles drilling in hall of St. Stanislaus Polish church in Toronto were arrested last night.

The Bank of England rate remained unchanged today at 5 per cent.

It is reported in Montreal that Russia is seeking $50,000,000 credit in Canada and United States.

Wheat dropped today in Chicago. The Swedish steamer Gooseberg, with a cargo of iron ore, was brought into St. John's harbor by British prize crew. She sailed from Spain and her cargo is presumed to have been destined for Germany.

WELL QUALIFIED Her Attempt to Show Her Great Amount of Tact Show That She Has None.

Yes, I'm up for election as president of the club, and I think I'd make rather a good one because, between ourselves, I have so much tact, which is, perhaps the most essential qualification for such an office.

They say tact is the expression of loving kindness, and I am sure I always have a kindly feeling toward my fellow creatures, even Mrs. McJones, who is running against me.

I told everybody that I would not allow any mention to be made of her husband's having been mixed up in that government scandal. He was acquitted and we must accept that as final, no matter what we might believe. I made a point of saying it before some of her particular friends, so she knows by this time that there is no ill-feeling between us, even if we are opponents.

Of course, I have my own warm supporters, and a little tact goes a long way with them. I ask them, two or three at a time to have lunch with me at one of the good restaurants, and I always tell them to order anything they like, and not to mind the expense, as I can economize in some other way.

Will say that they have been very considerate about it.

There is a certain element in the club which seems rather indifferent about their next president. They mostly live out town and one does not see them very often, so there is not much chance to demonstrate one's personal qualifications to them. I did have a chance yesterday with Miss Singer, who asked me about the musical programme for the winter. She thinks that I know it and is anxious to take part. I told her I should be delighted to use what influence I might have with the club and hardly failed at all now.

I asked George, my husband, what he thought of my chances for election, and he replied that he thought they were very good—considering. I asked what he meant by that, and he said, "Considering that I was in the club at all! I don't think George has the slightest qualifications for office—New York Times."

WERNER HORN GOES TO BOSTON FOR TRIAL

Portland, Me., March 25—The removal of Werner Horn to Boston for trial was ordered by the U. S. Circuit Court today.

Judge Putnam declined to listen to arguments by Horn's counsel that Horn's attempt to destroy the bridge at Vanceboro was an act of war and therefore, political in character. He refused to issue a writ of habeas corpus prevent or delay Horn's removal from the jurisdiction of the Maine court.

EATING OF WOUNDED HORSES IS TALKED OF IN GERMANY

An article on Germany's food supplies by Professor Schottelmaier, and taken from the Berliner Tageblatt, is printed by the London Daily News.

The article, dealing with the desirability of using horseflesh for food, was forwarded by the Daily News correspondent in Rotterdam, and quotes Professor Schottelmaier as follows:

"Even in times of peace, horseflesh is eaten by the poorer classes, and makes a very good substitute for beef. This source of supply ought to be utilized to a greater extent during the war, for many otherwise healthy strong horses are shot because they are wounded. These horses should be killed as soon as possible and transported immediately to Germany."

"Even if this meat were used only for feeding Asiatic prisoners of war it would not be wasted."

As the German supply of eggs is short, each person is expected to eat only one egg in five days. The Lokal-Anzeiger advises its readers not to use eggs in the customary Easter festivities as follows:

The Deutsche Tageszeitung announces that in all probability the government within the next few days will take over all stocks of cattle food.

G. M. ANDERSON REVEALS "PUNCH" PHOTOPLAY ART

G. M. Anderson, of the Western Esauary Company, tells the secrets of what constitutes a real "punch" in motion picture plays.

"By 'punch' I do not mean thrills and dramatic features, though these may be essential," he said. "These are found in any photoplay that gets by. I mean a subtle undercurrent feeling that reaches to the very depth of the human heart; that shows the tragedy of real life and leaves the spectator not only thrilled with the incidents of the play, but satisfied with the working out of events."

"The Tell Tale Hand," which is now being screened at the Empress, West Side, you find a normal girl with normal desires. She is just budding into young womanhood and is looking forward to all the joys of love and life as other girls do. But her outlook is blighted by a drunken father, who leads her, who tramples on all her finest feelings. She lives in a squalid village surrounded by rough men. The one man whom she thinks she might care for is too busy to pay her much attention, and the one who tries to make love to her is a drunken sot who knows of love only in his passion.

"She spurns him, and in vengeance he slays her father and accuses her of the crime. Through a series of circumstantial facts she is convicted of first degree murder. Forsaken and alone in prison, she that yearned for attention and the one who tries to make love to her is a drunken sot who knows of love only in his passion."

"There are plenty of circumstances that the real murderer is discovered. She is freed and finds that there has been a rough but strong man who has cared for her, the man of her dreams, who had not forsaken her but had unheeded the evidence which placed the crime on her accuser."

"There is the 'punch,' the soul-grinding tragedy of a motherless girl with crushed heart who finally wins the life and love that is her due."

"There are plenty of thrills in this drama, gun play, a posse hunt, a terrific hand-to-hand struggle on racing steeps, and a final chase which leaves one satisfied. It is the more subtle emotion that is not shown outwardly, but is felt as an undercurrent of humanism. That is 'punch.'"

CENSORS BLAMED IF NATION FAILS TO REALIZE PERIL

Information, Says London Paper is Concealed, Not From Enemy, But From British Public

London, March 25—The Daily Chronicle in an editorial says:

"A good many recent events of varying importance, from the Clyde strikes downward, have warned us that large sections of our people do not even realize the desperate nature of the life and death struggle in which we are involved. And how should they, with the censorship constantly exerted to conceal information, not from the enemy, but from the British public, and a War Office which prohibits all regular services of war correspondents?"

"Brief and occasional visits to the allies' lines, which are permitted at intervals to a few trained journalists under official guidance, have done something to show us the character of the trench warfare day by day, but these writers have had no opportunity of describing or reporting any actions. We hear of the successes, and in general terms of the gallantry of the men, but their losses and the names of the units engaged we only learn from the casualty lists. The last are served out to us in straggling daily instalments, and lack of proper presentation hides nothing from the public. Let us say, then, the German general staff, whose business it is to add figures, calculate units and compare dates, but effectively baffles the British public whom alone it is entirely calculated to bewilder."

"Ours is not a nervous nation, liable to be stampeded into panic. Nothing does us more good than to be told frankly of the difficulties before us and of the course of surmounting them. Why, after all these months of experience of the disastrous confusion of treating us like children, is not this done? It was the knowledge of our men's trials, not of their parents' residence, 272 Brussels street, aged thirteen years. The funeral will take place on Saturday
