Poems That Live

TO HIS FORSAKEN MISTRESS I do confess thou'rt smooth and fair,
And I might have gone near to love thee,
Had I not found the slightest prayer
That lips could speak, had power to move thee:
But I can let thee now alone,
As worthy to be loved by none.

I do confess thou'rt sweet; yet find
Thee such an unthrift of thy sweets,
Thy favors are but like the wind
That kisses everything it meets;
And since thou can'st with more than one,
Thou'rt worthy to be kissed by none.

The morning rose that untouched stands,
Armed with her briers, how sweetly smells!
But plucked and strained through ruder hands,
No more her sweetness with her dwells,
But scent and beauty both are gone,
And leaves fall from her, one by one.

Such fate, ere long, will thee betide,

When thou hast handled been a while,—
Like sere flowers to be thrown aside:

And I will sigh, while some will smile,
To see thy love for more than one
Hath brought thee to be loved by none.

—Sir Robert Ayton.

"THANK YOU."

Hamilton Spectator: Recently the head of a large business concern in the United States offered a prize of $5,000 for the best answer to the question: "How can my business be most speed-lily and surely improved?" The money went to a competitor, who simply wrote on a postcard the words "Say thank you!" It seems a very simple way of earning fi5,000, but the business man knew what he was doing when he awarded the prize, and if his large staff can be persuaded to act on the advice the sum will be returned many times over in extra business done.
