BOYS' SCHOOL BOOTS

STYLISH, STURDY, SENSIBLE

There is no department of our business to which we devote more personal attention than our Boys School Boots. In the years gone by the average boy was perfectly satisfied to wear uncomplainingly the Foot-wear bought and selected by his parents. In many cases the parents in their selection were guided almost entirely by the wearing possibilities of the shoe irrespective of appearance. Today the boy has a voice and choice in purchasing his School Shoes with the result that Boys' School Boots possess all the characteristics of those worn by his elders—Style, Shape and Quality.

KITCHEN MOTTOES

"For several years," said a woman who is alert for new things, "we have been able to find mottoes framed, appropriate to hang near the fireplace, in the boy's den, and near the entrance into the living room, but it has been left till now for some one to hit upon the motto for the kitchen. The other day I saw several of these for sale, framed appropriately to hang in the culinary department. 'What were some of the sentiments?'"

Well, one that struck home was 'Gues and ruin the cake.' Another contained a most excellent bit of advice wisely, if acted upon, would make the day a cheerier one for anybody who cooks. This was 'Stir a smile into the pudding.' Another read, 'A merry heart makes light panty.' The only other one I can now bring to mind is this: 'Order, cleanliness and know-how—these three; but the greatest is know-how.'—Newark News.

As yet the suffragettes haven't changed the politicians with Adam's downfall.

The Blue Pencilling of The Presentation List At Royal Court

LONDON SOCIETY NEWS

Picture of Canadian Girl Illustrates the New Art Idea of Woman's Dress—News of People From Dominion in England and on Continent

(Times' Special Correspondence)
London, March 9.—Though the appointment of Lord Sandhurst to be the new lord chamberlain in place of Lord Spencer, who recently resigned on the score of ill-health, was rather a surprise to a great many people, yet in an extent that is an admirable one. His early connection with the court as lord-in-waiting to Queen Victoria gave him good experience in the line and out of court life, which he will find invaluable, and he has a memory so famous that a friend once said of him, "Sandhurst is a man whose mind files all the facts that other minds forget."

These two qualifications fit him well for a task no man on earth should envy him. Besides entailing very hard work, especially on occasions such as coronations and so forth, the job is at once a delicate and a thankless one. And Lord Sandhurst has stepped into it at a rather difficult moment. You have heard already of the overcrowded state of the presentation lists, and it has with Lord Sandhurst to "blue pencil" certain names of young damsels anxious to be presented, and in many cases, to pacify indignant mothers afterwards.

Lord Sandhurst first came into the limelight when he became Governor of Bombay in 1885. He found the city in a dreadful state, and proceeded to make up municipal enterprises, such as an extension of the water supply, and the cleaning and best regulated cities of the east. The unpleasant task of finding out exactly what conditions were he took upon himself and personally visited all the poorer quarters of the town.

Lord Sandhurst entered the Coldstream Guards on leaving school and served all through the Indian Mutiny, being present at Lucknow and Cawnpore. He was commander of the forces in Ireland in 1879 and under secretary for war in 1880 and 1882, so that he has had a wide experience of the world in many circumstances. The new British ambassador at Bucharest (Roumania) Sir George Barclay, who has recently been in Persia—has a very charming wife who has accompanied him in nearly all his diplomatic travels, and they have a little daughter, who already speaks four languages—and is learning two more. When Sir George was promoted from Constantinople to Tehran his income rose from $5,000 a year to $22,500, and it will remain the same at his present post.

Lady Barclay is an old friend of "Caroline Fyfe," the white-haired poet, daughter of Roumania and they have many tastes literary and philanthropic, in common. At the royal palace in the city at St. James with its antlered halls, Lady Barclay and the queen have spent many pleasant hours together at music, discussing poetry, and planning schemes for the help of poor people.

The lost line of womanly beauty and the graceful modern dress of woman is a subject of interest now being discussed by society women and fashion writers. Paris was the originator of the discussion, and her artists are engaged in designing dresses which they may wriggle the feminine line "an approach to the alluring contour of the Venus of Milo."

In London the question was taken up by Solomon J. Solomon, R.A., who agreed with the Paris critics that the restricted skirt of the modern dress is ungraceful, and who launched a philippic against the prevailing mode. Saying that women to be graceful require a "loose" and that the present day attire is a very ugly prison for the figure, he advocates a return to what he terms the graceful lines of the Du Maurier women, which means an approach to the Victorian atrocities.

There is, however, a sharp division of opinion, both among fashion leaders and painters, and many prominent artists dissent from Mr. Solomon's views and deplore what they term a retrograde step in dress.

Curiously enough, at an artistic reception last week, the painting of a beautiful young Canadian lady, which is now being executed by A. Dancer May, a popular society portrait painter, was given as an outstanding example of modern artistic attire. The painting, which will probably be exhibited at the Royal Academy is of

I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they did me so much good I continued their use until I had used several boxes, and they restored me to health again. ASK FOR COMMISSION TO PROTECT FOREST, FISH AND GAME HERE

During the evening J. L. Jones, H. Tinsell, Bert Kennedy, J. Terry and J. Robertson from the Emerald of Ireland; D. B. Pidgeon, Fred Macneil and D. Arnold Fox added to the entertainment with musical selections.

The meeting was brought to a close by these present joining with D. B. Pidgeon in singing O Canada, and God Save the King.

The annual meeting of the association took place before the public meeting and the officers for the coming year were selected as follows: W. H. Thorne, president; E. A. Smith, second vice-president; John W. White, chairman of the finance committee; H. A. Brown, chairman of the committee on the wild animal committee; Dr. J. Lee Day, chairman upland birds committee; T. B. Dowling, chairman aquatic birds; S. B. Bastin, chairman legal committee; and Kenneth MacLachlan, chairman enforcement committee.

The executive in the morning of the officers with the chairman of the different committees and the following: R. H. Cochrane, F. M. Shannon, J. R. Thomson, G. E. Day, J. C. Chealey, H. Gilbert, H. McLean, G. M. Barker, R. B. Patterson and G. Smith.

The treasurer's report showed that the association is in a very flourishing condition. The secretary's report stated that 238 members were enrolled and four game wards had been selected on recommendation of the secretary. Several cases of pollution of streams had been dealt with and the city engineer had reported that the fishways at Loch Lomond would be properly fitted as soon as possible. The protection of New Brunswick's fish, forests and game by a commission with full power to enforce the laws was advocated at a public meeting held under the auspices of the Fish, Forest and Game Association in Keith's Assembly rooms last evening and a resolution to this effect will be forwarded to the local government.

Hon. Chas. E. Oak, of Bangor, told of the commission methods employed in Maine and the results secured. In arguing the necessity of greater protection he said that they figured that a moose in the woods was worth $500 to the state, as it cost an outsider that much, on an average, to secure one.

J. A. Knight, game commissioner of Nova Scotia, described the system there, and said that only lack of funds prevented them from making it more complete. Thomas Allan, superintendent of the Tobique Salmon Club, told of their methods of preserving fish in that stream, which has been of great value to the fishing in the lower river and harbor as well.

The executive was given authority to purchase the fishing privileges of the South Branch of the Oronto which will be offered for sale tomorrow, in St. John and Charlotte counties which have been damaged, and reported that the shadways would be repaired in the spring. It is expected that a shipment of trout will be secured to stock some of the lakes in this vicinity and an attempt will be made to have the government establish a hatchery in this province.

The report also said that the secretary regretted that the government did not seem disposed to help the association and
