A Free Press

The press is the greatest power in the world today. The German government well knows this. It has not only managed its own people, but has largely managed all other peoples through a manipulated press. In free countries it is parties that subsidize a servile press, to the ostensible of free papers with no such aid. All papers are not party papers. Some are prepared to make a new bargain before each election. Some are found faithful on the side of every moneyed corporation. Some are practically in partnership with corporations who have bargains to make with the public. How to spread their sails so as to benefit owners of patrons is the one rule.

Nothing must be said that will offend the advertiser. These are the visible bonds by which nations are bound hand and foot. And it is strange how readily men give strength to those who betray them. Charlatans should count as much in the choice of a man's newspaper as in the choice of his friends, but to do right in this matter requires some discrimination, as the most selfish press parades in the most lamblike garments. When the time of crisis came Germany found herself enslaved, and so it has been from time to time even in Canada, when selfish money interests by controlling the press have controlled elections. It is for those who are free men to make themselves the active champions of a free press.—Montreal Witness.

Steamer Missing

Steamer Dunelm, which left Sydney some thirty five days ago with a cargo of steel products, has not yet been reported, and grave fears are felt as to her safety. She is in command of Capt. Baxter Barbour, of this city, and his many friends are apprehensive regarding his fate. There are also two other Newfoundlanders on the ship, relatives of the captain.—Herald.

Mother

"God made a home where hearts might turn to rest,
When all the other homes of earth had failed.
God made a star whose light burned steady,
When all the other lights grew dim and paled."

"God made a voice that all the breadth of seas,
The change of seasons, or the flight of years
Could never silence, never rob of power
To reach, to bless, to guide, to silence fears."

"God made a love that wrapped our infancy,
And blessed us even when we knew it not—
A love that knew no barrier, no self—
A love that never faltered or forgot."

"This was God's gift, immortal, changeless, vast,
Whose name He wrote, because He knew no other
Name sweeter, on our waking consciousness,
In golden characters. That name was 'Mother.'"
