THE GALLANT BRITISH TAR.

A NEW song.

There's not a man who reckons courage yet
Have never failed in fight,
Who grieves with zeal our country's weal,
Our freedom and our right;
But though his strong and steady arm
Spread havoc in its blow,
Cry "Quarter!" and that arm will be
The first to spare its foe.
He reeks not though proud glory's shout
May be the knell of death,
The triumph won, without a sigh,
He yields his parting breath,
He's Britain's boast, and claims a toast!
In peace, my boys, or war,
Here's to the brave upon the wave—
The Gallant British tar.

Let but the sons of want come nigh,
And tell their tale to him,
He'll chide their eyes for weeping,
While his own are growing dim,
"Cheer up!" he cries, "we all must meet
The storm as well as calm;"
But turning on heel, Jack slips
The guinea in their palm.
He'll hear no long oration,
But tell you every man
Is born to act a brother's part
And do what good he can,
He's Britain's boast, and claims a toast!
"In peace, my boys, or war,
Here's to the brave upon the wave—
The gallant British tar.

The dark blue jacket that enfolds
The sailor's manly breast,
Bears more of real honor
Than the star and ermine vest,
Than the riche of folly in his head
May make the lunderman's mirth,
But nature proudly owns him
As her child of sterling worth.
His heart is warm, his hand is true,
His word is frank and free;
And though he plays the ass on shore,
He's Lion of the sea.
He's Britain's boast, and claims a toast!
"In peace, my boys, or war,
Here's to the brave upon the wave—
The gallant British tar!"

Variety.

THE HAPPY TYPO.

Mark Tapley—a human barrel of jolliness without hoops on—was arrested for being intoxicated. He gave his name as Getzaphat Take, and said he was a printer, and hailed from "The Gem of Science" office. He is a short man, of a beer-cask figure, and a face as rubicund, as if he slept in a room with red curtains. His answers to the questions of the authorities showed his countenance under all shades of misfortune. The justice being in genial humor, was inclined to banter the disciple of Ben Franklin, and accordingly addressed him as follows:

Judge—Well, Mr. Take it seems that you have thrown aside the "composing stick," and gone to getting drunk for a living. I am afraid you are a "bad case," and stand in need of "correcting." I think I shall send you to "quod."

These technicalities which were uttered in a sort of you-see I known your trade as well as you do sir, seemed to give Mr. Take that assurance which printers seldom lack, but of which the solemnities of a police court might temporarily have deprived him, and he answered.

Well at any rate, I'm glad we've no "galleys" in this country, or I suppose you'd put me in there, and well I better at that. But please your sir, going to jail is nothing the last time I was there I taught a rat and taught him to chew tobacco, besides inventing three new steps for a fancy hornpipe—it's a good deal better than setting "solid minion," more than three-quarters "figure work," and getting only a "pride and a half" for it. Lord bless you, 'Squire, I'd a great deal rather go to jail than not. I've got sick of work just now, and I'll have a chance to get the bile off my stomach.

Judge—You seem to take it easy; how do you propose to employ your time this trip.

Pris—Well, Corporal, I'm undecided whether I'll learn to whistle the "Bohemian Girl," practice standing on my head, or undertake to acquire the elegant accomplishment of balancing straws on my nose; if I could get a cat I'd teach her to play the fiddle, if I though the strings wouldn't remind her unpleasantly of intestinal Concerde, after her feline body had been nine times slain.

Judge—Mr. Take, you seem particularly happy under these circumstances; have you got a wife.

Pris—Not now, Lieutenant; I had one, but she ran off with a bow legged cobbler; I was so glad that I sent her dresses and a quit claim deed of her person which I signed in capital letters. She left me one boy, but he was a "foul copy," not a bit like me. I bound him 'printice to the type-sticking trade, but the first day he quarrelled with the devil," knocked over the "bank," pulled a "form off the imposing stone," and "pied" five columns; he dropped the "shooting stick" into the "alligator press," and in the evening he and another boy were caught rehearsing a broadsword combat with a couple of "column rules;" the foremen battered him with "mallet," and when he got home to me he had a "fancy head," if there ever was one.

Clerk—Where is he now?

Pris—He ran away with a circus, and the last I saw of him he was in the middle of a saw dust ring trying to tie his legs in a bow knot round his neck. I've been jollier since then than ever before.

Judge—You to be always jolly.

Pris—Sir I am; I laughed when my father turned me out of doors at 11 years of age, laughed when I broke my arm, and made saucy faces at the doctor when he was setting it; the happiest day I ever spent was one time when I hadn't but one shirt and a pair of pants to put on, had spent all my money, and gone hungry forty hours. I never was really unhapp but once in my life, and that was when I fell down and was fractured my collar bone, and skinned my leg so badly I couldn't get down on my knees to thank God that I had not broken my neck.

The Judge relented, and let Mr. Take go and that retund individual left the room trying to whistle and sing at the same time, and also dance an independent jig with each leg to a different tune.

A Goose Story.—A gentleman in a neighboring city in pursuit of a goose for his dinner was attracted by the sight of a plump, extra sized one.

'Is that a young one?' said he to the rosy-cheeked lass in attendance.

'Yes sir, indeed it is.'

'How much do you want for it?' asked the gentleman.

'A dollar, sir.'

'That is too much, I think, say five eighths and here's the money.'

'Well sir, as I would like to get you as a steady customer, take it.

The goose was carried home and roasted, but found to be as tough as to be uneatable.

The next day the gentleman accosted the fair poulterer:

'Did you not tell me that goose was young which I bought of you?'

'Yes sir, I did; and it was.'

'No, it was not.'

'Don't you call me a young woman? I am only nineteen.

'Yes I do.'

'Well, I have heard mother say many a time that it was nearly six weeks younger than me.

The Zouave and his Cat.—The Gazette de Lyons of the 19th September states that amongst the numerous wounded soldiers just arrived there, a soldier of the 2nd Zouaves excited particular attention. He was dressed in a republican hat with a feather, a frock coat buttoned up to the chin, and had with him a cat minus one leg. It appeared that he had performing a character at the French theatre before Sebastopol, when the drum beat to arms. Without having time to doff his theatrical costume, he was soon in the trenches, where he was wounded by the iron claw, where he lost his arm from the splinter of a shell, and had his right ear carried away by a musket ball, his cat, which remained during the engagement on his shoulder, losing its paw at the same time. Even in the hospital he would never part from his cat, which has come with him to France, where the Zouave hopes to find it as fine then that he were when the alarm was given.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

ERYSIPELAS OF EIGHT YEARS DURATION CURED!

Copy of a Letter from Captain Lechler, Bargemaster of Queen's Council, dated the 16th of July, 1854, to Professor Holloway.

Sir,—For a period of eight years I was afflicted with an attack of the erysipelas, which at times rendered my right arm entirely useless. Sometimes it would attack my face, and at others my body; in addition to the inconvenience resulting from the itching and burning, which rendered me totally unfit for any duty, my appearance was frightful. Every remedy which I could hear of was resorted to, but in vain, I continued to suffer from this painful complaint, until I was induced to try your Ointment and Pills; after using them for a few weeks, a visible improvement took place, and I feel comparatively perfect. I am therefore, by continuing with your medicines for a few weeks, completely cured, and now enjoy the use of my limbs. The truth of this statement is well known to my fellow-men in the locality in which I reside, and I am ready to answer any inquiries that may be required in confidence.

I am, Sir, yours respectfully,
(Signed) GEO. SINCLAIR.

ULCERS IN THE LEG.—REMARKABLE CURE!

Copy of a Letter from Mr. Edward Tuplin, of Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, dated the 21st July, 1852.

To Professor Holloway.

Sir,—For many years, while I was employed as a ferry master on the river Mersey, I was subject to a bad ulcer on my leg, which broke out every year, during the fall of the year, to the great annoyance of the family, a variety of remedies were tried, but unsuccessfully, and it seemed as if the ulcer was destined to be my constant companion during the remainder of my days. At length my attention was attracted to your Ointment and Pills, and I resolved to give them a fair trial. I am happy to say that after using them for about five weeks, the ulcer was completely healed, and has not since broken out. I have not been troubled with any return of the complaint, although it is now eighteen months since the cure was effected. I remain, Sir, yours truly,

(Signed) HENRY WALLEY.
