Cosy Costumes for Breezy October.

There is a crisp, invigorating charm about our clear, fall weather, which makes life seem well worth living when we are appropriately clad. Though the evening air is apt to be chill and penetrating and there are always occasional days when nature, in a stormy mood, seems to give us a foretaste of what she will do later on when winter begins. But fortunately for everybody it is now easy to have clothing suited to every varying mood of the weather. A layer of Fibre Chamois used to interline your coat, cape or any other wrap will give it a genial, healthful warmth which neither a playful zephyr nor yet a wintry blast can penetrate. Or have a layer put through the bodice of your fall gown. It doesn't add either bulk or weight, and will make it possible to dispense with a wrap altogether. Use, of course, the Rigby Waterproofed line for all skirts and wraps, and enjoy the comfort of keeping dry as well as warm in spite of sudden showers, and of having your garments still stylishly stiff even after a wetting. Make all the children's frocks and coats up with this interlining. It is so light that the smallest shoulders can't feel its weight, and yet is durable enough to stand the rough usage of children's frolics, always keeping out the wind and cold.

Made, as it is, from pure spruce fibre, the non-conducting properties of Fibre Chamois make it an invaluable foundation for all fall and winter clothing for everybody.

Bad soap did it.
