

Harrison Ford and Kate Capshaw, early odds-on favorites to play Don Millerlite and Babs Donalduck in 13-part PBS mini-series CFS Bashers.

Hacks hacked

by Getaway Staff

CFS chair-elect Babs Donalduck, and Arts Rep Don Millerlite were found dead in Donalduck's apartment last Friday night. Foul play is suspected.

"I sure hope so," said friend and fellow commie pinko Arts Rep Godd Rudder, "seems to me being found with your head bashed in with a crow bar is pretty foul."

Rudder, visibly shaken, added that Millerlite, and Donalduck, "where probably engaged in one of their frequent midnight policy generating tete-a-tete caucus," at the time of the attack.

Edmonton City Police are stumped and have yet to lay charges.

"Well we've found the murder weapon, and it shouldn't be that hard to trace a monogrammed crowbar," said police chief "Hang-em-high" Bob Lunney, who's taken the case on personally.

"This homicide has got to be one of the most violent I've seen in years. Plus, have you ever heard of anyone being so stupid as to use a crowbar as a murder weapon?" asked Lunney.

"Who ever did this should be hanged, maybe worse," added Lunney. "Who knows, this guy might go off and kill someone important like a cop or something."

Lunney also cautioned the Getaway: "If any of you assholes even try to twist my words around even an iota I'll have you paper siezed again."

None of the Students' Union executive could be reached for comment since none of them could stop giggling long enough to pick up the phone.

Current CFS chair Beth Ollyshitbatman's only comment as to the murder of her successor was: "Does that mean we have to rig another election?"

Council does dick in 8-hour pow-wow

Getaway official SU mouthpiece

by Peter Blockhead

During an eight-hour marathon meeting yesterday and some of today, Students' Council decided to make the Getaway the official newspaper of the students' union.

"Well, very basically, I think it's a stupid move," said VP Internal Gorge Stump, who is responsible for the official student union newspaper.

"At least the Getaway is clever enough to hide its biases even from me so I have to invent them, but since the basis of the Getaway is subtle, ironic humor that accurately reflects reality, I haven't got a hope in hell."

In council, Stump pleaded for members' sympathy. "If I criticize something, the Getaway staff would defend themselves by saying it was just a sarcastic comment and I would look really stupid."

SU President Fried Hoggins agreed, favoring the Grind over the Getaway, the Gateway, the Computing Science Bulletin and the Plant Science Newsletter.

"The Grind had the decency to run a two-page column written by me and a two-page feature interview with me," said Hoggins. "The Getaway has repeatedly re-fused my attempts to use it as my personal mouthpiece and I never see Getaway reporters asking to interview me."

Abstaining from the vote, VP External Pawl Acorn was diplomatic about the issue. "

" he quipped.

However, Arts councillor Godd Rudder loudly voiced support for the Getaway as the official SU publication.

"It's not because it's that good a publication or that the principles involved are worth supporting or that cost is a factor," said Rudder. "It's just that Fried and Stump voted against it."

"And doubtless, my comrade Don Millerlite would have voted as I have if he were still with us," Rudder added tearfully.

Arts rep Millerlite and former SU VP Academic and CFS chair-elect Barb Donalduck were found dead this weekend in Donalduck's apartment. Foul play is suspected.

Meanwhile, VP Finance Christine Brinkly, sporting a new poofy hairstyle, voted in favor of the Getaway.

"Ooh it will be fun to sit back and laugh at ourselves every week. I mean, all the world's a stage and we are merely players on it."

Donna Thesbian, VP Academic, stayed out of the debate, saying the Getaway does not fall within the jurisdiction of her portfolio.

In other business, council narrowly defeated a motion to pay tribute to Millerlite and Donalduck.

Commented local political hack Kenn Bozoman, "We should run council as a business and council has no business mythologizing the commie-pinko-bleeding heart likes of Liberal lackeys like Millerlite and Donalduck."

The meeting finally adjourned at 3 a.m., when quorum petered out as several councillors complained of indigestion and nausea.

Commies, fascists clash

by A. Political

The NDP is nothing but a contemptible band of silly-willies, says U of A Conservative Club member Maloney O'Brien.

The remark was made at a debate held Thursday between the U of A New Democrats and the Conservatives in Dinwoodie Lounge. Called to discuss comparative ideologies and solutions to today's economic woes, the debate erupted into a heated exchange when NDPer Bent Broadhead, grinning devilishly, "accidentally" tipped his coffee into the lap of his Conservative rival.

Maloney O'Brien responded with an egg sandwich right jab to Broadhead's forehead, and the scrap was on.

Debate moderator Mid Dulground, who ducked out of sight with the first blow, was dismayed by the activities of the speaker.

"I've never seen such childish behaviour," Dulground squealed from beneath a nearby desk.

But he reserved his most severe condemnation for the partisan crowd of 50. About 20 members of the crowd, brandishing nuclear disarmament buttons, rushed the stage when the fracas erupted. They buried Maloney O'Brien beneath a pile of seat cushions and threatened to tie him to a cruise missile.

O'Brien was saved only by the quick actions of Campus Security, who arrived within two hours. The crowd dispersed peaceably, bringing the debate to a close.

A follow-up forum has been scheduled in order that, in Dulground's words, "these two political factions can effectively air their views." It is set for this Thursday, 2:00 pm, in the U of A wrestling room. TSN will be on hand to broadcast the event.

Deluded anthropology prof states, "Remember the Galapagos."

Prof discovers self

by Suet C. Scam

University of Alberta officials are at odds with an anthropology professor who recently announced the discovery of himself.

"It just isn't true," said Campus Security head honcho Joe Bobb. "He's lying."

Dr. Quentin Peabody, whose brain and wardrobe were frozen in 1932, claims he was walking his dog in the Windsor Park area when he realized he was alive.

"It's a very important archeological find," said Peabody. "Very rarely do you hear of academics who make important observations of the society they do not live in and who contribute to the mosaic of academia finally discover they are part of the real world."

But Tory building supervisor Upwright Reck told a different story. He said his department was getting complaints since 1975 from unsuspecting pedestrians who pass under Peabody's window only to be struck by a paper wad.

"Not only did it pose a danger to pedestrians, we thought the paper build-up inside was so massive it would pose a fire hazard," explained Reck.

"We've been getting the complaints for some time now and we

continued on page 2