

Ironmen Plan Spring Tour to States

After a three year respite from touring, the UNB Ironmen have finalized plans for a spring tour south of the border to play member clubs of the Virginia Rugby Union. This will be the fourth time UNB has toured in Virginia.

The Ironmen have been practicing since late December in hopes of meeting the American squads with comparable fitness levels. Due to weather restrictions UNB won't see any actual fieldwork until their first stop in Berlin, Connecticut to play the Strollers RFC. In years past the lack of on-field work has not hampered the Ironmen due to their concentration on skill and fitness work during the winter months making the transition from gymnasium to rugby pitch a comparatively easy one.

Touring can only be described as a fine learning experience in which both members and tour veterans alike can expand their knowledge and talents by playing against different rugby unions. The United States has historically fallen behind Canadian rugby unions in terms of organization and overall player ability due to their later adoption of the game. In the past decade the Americans have risen to a par with Canadian rugby, and in certain aspects such as regimented coaching clinics,

The Ironmen have always had extremely competitive junior and university programs, is threatening to qualitatively surpass Canadian precedents.

tours to the United States and this one should be no exception. UNB's tour schedule will include five games in an eleven day period from April 29 to May 10. The first stop is slated for Berlin, Connecticut a member of the New England Rugby Union, and whom UNB has enjoyed a close tournament relationship with. The next stop will be in Lynchburg, Virginia to play Lynchburg RFC, after which UNB will play the University of Virginia who is ranked a strong second in the VRU (UNV failed to make the top ten in NCAA standings last year). The fourth game will be against James River RFC who have been perennially the finest team in the Virginia Rugby Union, and in the final game UNB will play the fifth ranked Richmond RFC.

Carrying many members of the highly successful 1986 team the Ironmen hope to have an extremely cohesive and well disciplined touring unit.
