Mahometan Women.

The fact that all Turkish women must dress alike in the streets gives rise to the impression of a sameness of character that does not in the least exist among them," says Mary Mills Patrick, president of the American College for Girls in Constantinople. "A superficial observer who meets these veiled figures in public places, shrouded in a mysterious costume that suggests great possibilities of beauty behind it, may wonder indefinitely what kind of a life these figures really lead, without any clue to the solution of the problem. Yet life in Turkish society is as real and varied as in America, and often far more dramatic.

"There are decided types among Turkish women. There is the butterfly, who lives for pleasure; the domestic woman, and even the strong-minded woman, and, They say love is blind, but a woman can see a thousand qualities in a man he never possesses. Wash greasy dishes, pots or pans with ish women. There is the butterfly, who lives for pleasure; the domestic woman, and even the strong-minded woman, and, in addition to these, a class exists not found in America, the women who belong to court society.

"The butterfly is often a Circassian woman, and was perhaps brought to Constantinople to be sold to the highest bidder, and throughout all her childhood was taught to look forward to a possible life at the capital, to be made gay and bright, with plenty of money and fiirtation and social success. See has, perhaps, the bright blue eyes and golden hair that are so rare among the Turks to give her the place of emimence that she desires. Because of her beauty her husband showers her with presents and fills her life with pleasure. Her eyelashes and eyebrows are painted, but not very noticeably, and diamonds and other beautiful stones flash from her hands, her wrists, her neck, and her shoes are low, even in winter, with pointed toes and very high heels.

"When ahe goes out she is accompanied by several servants and one or two eunuchs, to look after her comfort, and she drives in a beautiful private carriage drawn by Arabian horses, and has carte blanche in the shops to make as many purchases as she wishes of silks and satins and jewelry. When her blue eyes fade and her bright hair grows gray, will her power wane and her place be given to another? Perhaps not. That will depend on the characters with which she has to deal, the number of sons that she has, and her ability to keep the ascendency that her beauty has gained for her.

"The domestic Turkish woman presents a great contrast to the brilliant creature that we have just described. She is rather large and stolid-looking, careless as to her dress, and of a simple and amiable character. She has a very easy life compared with that of her American sisters. There is not much house keeping in a Turkish house, and what there is is done by slayes and servants, who consider themselves permanent members of the family and realize what is expected of them. Rooms

Their own simple food is served to them at irregular intervals, when they feel hungry. There is perhaps a French governess to teach the children, who does not like the irregular life of the harem, and an exception is made in her favor, and she dines at the master's table, where the food is served more to her taste. Her apartments are, however, in the side of the house belonging to the women, which is entirely separate from the other half of the establishment. The best portion of a man's life is his little nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love.

Scaled, bulk or separate tenders addressed to E. J. Peltier will be received at the office of the undersigned up to 12 o'clock noon on May 18th for the various trades, including steam heating, required in the erection of a brick hotel with stone foundation in the town of Wallaceburg.

separate from the other half of the establishment.

"On bright days the domestic Turkish woman takes all her family to some place of public resort, where they sit in the sunshine all the day long, buy sweets of the ever-present street peddler, smoke cigarettes and drink coffee. They never endanger their nervous system by trying to catch any particular steamer either in going or coming, but start when the spirit moves, and wait at the landing for a convenient steamer, reaching home early or late, as it happens.

"Let us now turn to that product of modern progress, the educated Mahometan woman. She may be found here and there, perhaps in the harems of princes, or of pashas, or even sometimes in the middle classes of society, although she is not commonly found anywhere as yet. She reads English, French and German readily, with a good pronunciation, having the aptitude for languages usually found with Turkish women. She reads the daily papers, and has decided opinions in regard to all political affairs. The advanced Moslem woman has a private room, instead of living in the rooms with the other women, and in this room are found some unusual articles for a Turkish house—namely, a writing desk, some bookshelves upon which stand many of the new books of the day, and on the walls hang some really fine engravings.

"She longs to travel, but that is not on the walls hang some really line engravings.

"She longs to travel, but that is not yet allowed to a Turkish woman, at least, beyond the bounds of her own land. She has been to Egypt and Syria, but that does not satisfy her, and she even dreams of going to Paris and Berlin to work in the libraries there. She scorns the frivolities of ordinary society, and contemplates forming a club, where kindred spirits may discuss congenial and contemplates forming a club, where kindred spirits may discuss congenial subjects, but that has not yet been possible. Her influence in the press is already felt, and one may foresee that she will form one of the elements in the forces that are rapidly changing the conditions of Turkish life.

"Such are some of the phases of life among Turkish women. It is a life that has its romance and mystery, its commonplace side, and its features of progress, and is, after all, only the Eastern edition of the experiences that are common to the women of all nations."

The Latest.

Oyster Bay—It has leaked out that the Roosevelts breakfasted this morning, but the wimost retreence is maintained as to what they ate.

The President went out on horseback during the forenoon. A great crowd had collected. Mr. Roosevelt rode facing the horse's head. When the people saw this they broke into cheers.

The Roosevelts' cook shopped in the city to-day. She wore heliotrope de chine with a lace front and a small floral toque of violets. She shook hands warmly with all the press representatives, but asked to be excused from discussing politics at this time.

A cow belonging to President Roosevelt broke out of her pasture just at noon and was photographed in eighteen positions for the New York papers before she could be got back.

The late extras confirm the rumor that all is quiet at the Roosevelt home to-night, but quote no official authority.

Slovenly Conversation.

Have you ever considered how a shorthand report of your conversation would look if printed in a newspaper? Most of us would blush redly and be much ashamed of it, and would call the paper an impudent sheet without respect for the decencies of iffe.

without respect for the decencies of life.

Conversation formerly was something of a fine art—like letter-writing—and people of any pretensions edited their talk before it passed their lips. Now-adays we all converse as though we had never been at school, and the same topics are discussed in the barroom, the stable, and the polite drawing-room. Current slang is preferred to pure English, even by young women, and the cant of the turf and the ring is familiar to the lovellest of our girls. It has become a fad to be careless of one's English, and Lindley Murray or Goold Brown would swoon away if, from their souches in the elysian fields, they could overhear the conversation going on in overhear the conversation going on in the homes of educated people. But it is not the grammatical so much as the literary quality of our conversa-tion which has deteriorated. We talk about commonplace and vulgar things, and, what is worse, we talk about them in a commonplace and vulgar way. We have none of the salons of a century or have none of the salons of a century or two ago in which conversation was cultivated and reverenced. Our women do not discuss philosophy and high politics as the women did in Paris when Napoleon lost his temper at Madame de Stael. Polite conversation is preserved to-day by small cotéries, scattered here and there and unknown to each other. Perhaps brilliant conversation, the sort that begets epigrams and makes memoirs worth reading, never did flourish except in small coteries. May one suspect that much of the political conversation of the salons was mere non-sense? After all, brilliant conversation presupposes brains, and brains were never very common either in Paris of elsewhere.

The quality of conversation depends more on what is said than on the subject to the salons was mere or what is said than on the subject.

The quality of conversation depends more on what is said than on the subject. One can fancy some men—Arthur McEwen, for instance, or Charles Dickens—talking very well indeed about prize-fighting. Thackeray wrote an entertaining paper, having a delicious literary flavor, about the famous match between John C. Heenan, the Benicia Boy, and Tom Sayers. Other people have written flat and stupid things about the most intellectual subjects. One cannot talk well or brilliantly unless one can think well or brilliantly, but one can put a little thought into his conversation, and can avoid that slovenliness of speech which is so common in this of speech which is so common in this day.

The Bills Just Balanced.

Many a man—in print—has paid for Christian Science treatment with imagin-ary checks, but it has remained for a Christian Science healer to put a similar ary checks, but it has remained fer a Christian Science healer to put a similar device into actual practice. Of course, it happened in New York. The first of anything always does happen in New York. A Christian Science healer, gender feminine, age not polite to ask, came into the office of a prominent New York dentist recently and announced that she wanted her teeth "fixed up."
"There's nothing the matter with your teeth," said the dentist. "You only think there is."

But the healer, ignoring the remark, sat down in the chair and winced and moaned, "even as you and I." There was a good deal the matter, so that before her series of appointments was over a bill of $50 had mounted up against her. At the first of the month the dentist sent around his bill.

But he was not a sharp man in some ways. He had told her, while operating, that he was troubled with rheumatism, and in a day or two he received in reply to the bill a little note.
"My dear doctor," it read, "I have been giving you a series of absent treatments for your so-called rheumatism, and I find that our two bills just balance."

Then the doctor grew wise and let the matter drop. But he does not operate on Christian Scientists any more.

Why Is It?

Why Is It?

There are a few regular occasions on which every pretty girl feels inclined to give vent to her feelings by a "good cry." One is when her plain sister enters into the bonds of matrimony with an exceedingly good-looking man. It is very mortifying, if you happen to be pretty, to be left out in the cold, and the pretty girl never has understood, and never will understand, how it is. And perhaps it is really a good thing for the beauty of the family that she is so ignorant on this matter. If she fully comprehended the pain workings of that strange creature an, matrimony would lose its dearest charm. The handsome man marries the plain girl. Cry as we will, this is a fact, and one that we may test the actuality of every day if we will.

To take up the question of forlorn beauty. Why is it? A man who is good-looking must admire beauty. He does admire it; he cannot help himself. Then why, the pretty girl enquires, does he marry her plainer sister?

The answer may best be found in the letters of twelve intelligent men on the subject of choosing a wife. Each one stated seriously what qualities he would look for in a possible partner, and set them down in order, the most important first, the less important following. Taking an average, their ideal was to be as follows: (1) Kind-hearted, true and sympathetic; (2) lively and fond of children; (3) proud of herself for the sake of her friends; (4) a good housekeeper and a busy bee; (5) a graceful figure and beautiful; (6) wealthy and clever.

The plain girl scores at once with her sympathy; it is her chief and most powerful weapon against a man. The girl with good looks has no need to find friends by being sympathetic, and it is doubtful if people would believe her sympathy to be genuine. At all social gatherings the plain girl is so much aloue that her manner appears at once modest and retiring. Let a handsome man give her half an hour of his company and her whole mind is bent on being agreeable. But the pretty girl has a score of men to talk to, and falls into a
