QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous

BREACH OF CONTRACT.

I bought a pig from an advertiser, who agreed to furnish me pig for so much, and register him. I sent cash, received pig, but never got registration papers. What action should I take to secure registration papers? A. B. H.

Ans.—Write him, registering your letter, stating that if certificate of registration is not furnished within a certain time, say 30 days, you will enter an action for breach of contract. If this does not have the desired effect, get your solicitor to write him, giving reasonable notice of action to be taken, when, if not heeded, more stern proceedings may be commenced, presuming that you are in a position to substantiate your statement of the case. We are at a loss to understand why a business man should treat a customer in this manner. It is not business in any sensible sense of the term, and will not wear.

SEEDING DOWN HILLSIDE ORCHARD.

I have a sidehill orchard which I sowed with oats last year and put seed on it, but the seeding did not catch, as the oats grew too stout. Would it be wise to seed it down with alfalfa? If so, how would I go about to sow it? It is well drained. If not alfalfa, what would you recommend? H. A. B.

Ans.—Never sow alfalfa in an orchard, except possibly as a cover crop, to be plowed under early the following spring. Alfalfa is such a deep-rooted, strong-growing crop that it uses up too much of the soil moisture and available fertility, thus robbing the trees. We have known orchards to be ruined by it and have yet to see one where alfalfa has been growing a few years, that did not have a sickly color of foliage on the trees. Of course the result would probably not be so bad if the alfalfa were mowed each time it grew up and used as a mulch about the trees, but even then its effect would be injurious. When the orchard is on a hillside and the system of sod culture must be adopted, seed down with shallower-rooted meadow crops, say, red clover, 6 pounds, alsike 2 pounds, timothy 3 pounds and orchard grass 3 pounds. Work up as soon as possible, drag-harrow or disk repeatedly till late May or June, then when the ground is nice and mellow, sow the seed without a grain crop and harrow in.

PEAS AFTER TURNIPS—PREMATURE BIRTH.

1. Would peas do well on land that had turnips on last year and was fall-plowed? It is clean of weeds, that is why I would prefer it sod. Would it be too solid?

2. Calf came 33 days before the allotted time of nine months; was alive, but died in two days on account of not getting passage freely enough. Give proper instructions for rearing such a calf. It was strong as the average, but could not get up.

Ans.—1. Peas should do well enough after turnips, but we do not consider it the proper arrangement of rotation. Peas work in best when grouped with the root and corn crops, and should follow sod. While peas are not very good to keep down thistles or such weeds, there is no crop better, unless it be buckwheat or rape, to choke out grass. After peas, sow wheat, and seed down. The turnip land should be sown with barley, spring wheat, oats, emmer or mixed grains, and seeded to clover this year. It is a great mistake and entails heavy loss of fertility to go on cropping a field year after year without seeding down. It is almost equally bad to leave one too many years consecutively in sod. Short rotation kills weeds, saves fertility, yields the best crops and builds up a farm.

2. In such case, the contents of the anus should be removed with the oiled finger, and a tablespoonful of castor oil administered as a drench in warm milk from the dam. Calf should be either held up to suck, a little at a time, or a small portion of the dam's fresh milk given warm from a bottle with a rubber nipple. The cow's first milk is essential, as it is of a relaxing nature, and she should not be milked out clean for four or five days.
