John Liddy is having a very broad smile these days. When asked by The Planet as to the nature of the joke, he laughingly remarked, "Well, you see, I have added a menagerie to the list of attractions around my place."
John Liddy has a good practical joke, and he sprang a good one on his neighbors the other day. He secured a stuffed moose which was used by Thomas S. one & Son in their window decorations last Christmas, and placed it under a tree in the field to the left of his residence on Colborne street.
He then placed a box of hay under the tree and made the scene more the look of a good distance from the road so that any passer-by would inspect the deception. The crafty ex-Alderman was well aware of this fact and, after fixing his moose, he lay cautiously in wait to see the fun.
The first to bite was a man walking to church last Sunday morning. Seeing the moose, he stopped, looked, and quite naturally wondered how it got over and found out, and this was exactly what Mr. Liddy wanted him to do. The man armed himself with a club to protect himself from any vicious attack which might occur on the part of the moose, and proceeded on his journey of discovery. He made a very cautious approach and had not gone far when he wondered that the moose did not move, but stood staring steadily at him. He proceeded slowly a little further, when the idea suddenly struck him that the animal was probably preparing to make a rush at him. He was so afraid that he thought that in such a case it would be safer to be in the lead he immediately turned and scrambled for the fence.
He was treated in his flight by the sound of "Hallelujah! Hallelujah!" proceeding from a neighboring corn field where Mr. Liddy had been a delighted spectator of the whole affair. He did not stop, however, until he reached the fence, when he found to his relief that he had performed his 100 yard sprint alone.
It did not take long for him to see the joke after that and he was determined not to be the only one caught. As a result, Mr. Liddy in the corn field has had the greatest cause for merriment ever since.
