WOLFVILLE, KING'S CO., N. S.

TERMS:
$1.00 Per Annum.
(IN ADVANCE.)

CLUBS of five in advance $4.00.

Local advertising at ten cents per line for every insertion, unless by special arrangement for standing notices. Rates for visiting advertisements will be made known on application to the office, and payment on transient advertising must be guaranteed by some responsible party prior to its insertion.

The Acadian Job Department is constantly receiving new type and material, and will continue to guarantee satisfaction on all work turned out.

Legal Decisions
1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office, whether directed to his name or another's or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must give up all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them un-called for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

POETRY.

Lend a Hand.

Lend a hand to an erring brother,
Stand not aloof and harshly blame,
Priding yourself with many another
That you are free from his sin and shame.

Go not away to your silent chamber,
And make long prayers for a friend
Whom you see every day;
Deeds will avail more than all your praying
Of tongue-made prayers, he they ever as long.

Love and gentleness form the lever
By which the fallen one is raised,
Rebuke and scorn will answer never,
Nor studied lectures paraphrased:
A few low words in kindness spoken,
A civil nod and a kindly smile
Have far more weight in humanity's balance.

Than ever a massive golden pile.
Then lend a hand to your erring brother,
Whether of high or low degree,
For God ordained that to each other
Men as brothers should live and be;
There is too much censure in this brief
earth-banishment,
Too much of Dives and Lazarus played—
Too few smiles and words of kindness,
And oft too many long prayers made.
—Edwin B. Love.

A Life for a Love.

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

"I want you to love him, Gerry; I want you to feel for him a little bit, as I do, as if he were the first of men, you understand. Don't you think you could try? I wish you would."

"You see I have my own father, darling."

"Oh yes, but really now—the rector is a nice old man, but Gerry, if you were to speak from your inmost heart, without any prejudice, you know; if you could detach from your mind the fact that you are the son of the rector, you would not compare them, Gerry, you could not."

"As you say, Valentine, I could not. They stand on different pedestals. Now let us change the subject. So you are the happy possessor of a thousand a year."

"We both possess that income, Gerry. Is not it sweet of father—he felt for me at once. He said he was proud of me, that I was going to make a capital wife—he said you were a lucky fellow, Gerry."

"Yes, darling, so I am, so I am."

"Then he spoke of a thousand a year to begin with. He mentioned a lot more, but he said a thousand was an income on which I might begin to learn to save. And he gave me a cheque for the first quarter to-night. He said we had better open a banking account. As soon as we get in, I'm going to give you the cheque, I'm afraid to keep it. Father said we might open a separate account in his bank."

"My father has always banked at the Westminster," said Gerald. "It would suit me best to take the money there."

They had reached the house by this time. Gerald opened the door with a latch-key, and the two went into the pretty, cosy drawing-room. Valentine threw off her white fur wrap, and sank down into an easy-chair. Her dinner dress was white, and made in a very simple girlish fashion—her hair, which was always short and curled in little rings about her head and face, added to the extreme youth of her appearance. She raised her eyes to her husband, who stood by the mantel-piece. The expression she wore was that of a happy, excited, half-spoiled child, a creature who had been somebody's darling from her birth. This was the predominating expression of her face, and yet—and yet—Gerald seemed to read something more in the gaze of the sweet eyes-to-night; a question was half coming into them, the dawn of a possible awakening might even be discerned in them.

"My darling," he said, suddenly coming up to her, putting his arm about her, and kissing her with passion, "I love you better than my life—better—better than my hope of heaven. Can you love me a little, Valentine? Just a little?"

"I do love you, Gerald." But she spoke quietly, and without any answering fire.

His arms dropped, the enthusiasm went out of his face; he went back

MILLINERY!

On Wednesday last we extended a cordial invitation to you all to visit our first grand display of Spring Millinery and we thank you heartily for the liberal way you responded, our show rooms being thronged all day. We promised you great attractions in Millinery creations and from the many compliments bestowed upon us from one and all, we concluded our labors were far from being in vain and that our display was never surpassed in this city.

We value your compliments most highly and that our display was never surpassed in this city.

Notwithstanding all the pleasant remarks you have cheerfully given us, we must adhere to the old quotation "Eternal Vigilance is the price of liberty"—and though the past few days would lead us to believe that we are nearing the goal of fame, in Millinery, yet we shall not be content to rest upon our oars, but shall be found always in the lead as to Millinery and Millinery Novelties.
