The farmer who looks on his farm, his stock, and his other belongings merely as a means to make money, which he is reluctantly forced to stick to, will never find either profit or rleasure in his work. But the man who feels pride in his beasts, and has a kindly feeling toward them, is sure to turn the commonest drudgery into a source of pleasure, and a good deal more money into the bargain. The writer went lately into a barn where a lot of farmers' horses were stabled after delivering their loads of wheat at the elevator. One team was in fine condition, and he complimented the young man who owned them. The owner said they were eating nother but oat-straw and four quarts of oats at a feed. . Why. said the next man along, 'my team gets a peck of oats and good hay all the time, and they are very much thinner than yours. In fact I can-not push flesh on them.'

The other man's secret was soon told. His horses were carefully blanketed whenever they went into a cold stab'e at the end of a trip to market and when cooled in that way were thoroughly groomed. That lad and his two brothers, who do the same thing, will have those same teams good to use and good to look at long af er the present generation of unskilfully managed and unwisely fed the maximum and minimum column whose beasts around them have been killed he highest and lowest temperature in the 24 by pneumonia or some similar disease and thrown to the wolves. A Remarkable Case .- Mr. Walter To SECURE EARLY MATURITY ANI MALS MUST BE KEPT THRIFTY It is evident that with som classes of stock the farmer who feeds ured after taking only eight bottles of for market and realizes a profit must do a good many things. At the start, to be a successful feeder he must of necessity be a good one. He must feed from the start. To allow an animal to make a slow growth and then when a sufficient development has been reached in this way to feed it for market will add to the cost to such an extent that in many cases no profit will be realized. Stock must be kep, thrifty and growing in order to secure early maturity. The stock should as far as possible be ready for market at a certain age-hors at not over ten months cattle at not over three years; in a majority of cases two and a half is better. One decided advantage in keeping stock thrifty is that a better advantage can be taken of the market than in any other way. Yet, at the same time, in many cases it is a good plan to feed to a certain season, being ready to sell, however, whenever really profitable price can be realiz-

Ashes used as a fertilizer and generally very profitable. They supply potash to stimulate the nerves of the growing plants and are thus a true manure. In contact with clay soil they liberate the phosphate of lime, with manure they hasten decomposition. It does not pay a farmer to produce less on his land thau it is capable of producing. A large crop exhausts its fertility more than a small one, but the cost of harvesting the large one is little more than it costs to harvest a small one. Part of the profits from the large crop can be used in restoring the fertility of the land. It is only when there is a profit from crops to restore fertility that failure in farming can be averted. To get immediate returns, potash is necessary in some form, and, if properly used. it will enable the farmer to have a succession of large crops, thereby leaving him profitable returns, part of which can be used in restoring the soil. With small crops and no returns, the end large crop can be used in restoring

G. B. Klophel, M. D., in the January ' Ladies' Home Journal'. If the child complains of being cold, its feet and hands should be bathed in as hot water as it can stand. When the child is very young it may be readily ascertained if it he cold or not by feeling its hands and head. Under no circumstances should hot applications be made to the throat. If the child is old enough, it may be given broken ice to suck constantly, even if the water is spit out. The cold applications inhibit the growth of the microbes. The patient's hands should be washed frequently-and here let me say so should those of the attendants—and the vessel used for the purpose should not be used by any one else. The patient's clothing needs protection in front. This may be done by pinning back of the neck a large piece of linen or cotton fabric, which will cover the whole front of the child and reach as far as the knees. A material should be used which can easily be boiled or burned when soiled. The little patient will if old enough, will want to spit, and for a spittoon a small wooden box, with an inch of sawdust on the bottom, is capital. Fresh sawdust should be supplied at least once a day-three times a there are a dozen. It seems to be day would be better-and that which

HOW TO CURE CORNS.

There are multitudes of corn cures, some of which are supposed to operate by some mysterious magical agency, and others by chemical action upon the corn. The latter are the only ches to be depended upon. The following is a simple and effective remedy, known Acetic acid
