tive Advertising in Kansas City. Twenty-six merchants in Kansas City held a consultation on an even ing during the winter when business was at its lowest ebb. These merchants all owned stores in one block. They saw thousands of persons passing their stores every day and going farther downtown to make purchases. farther downtown to make purchases. Attractive window displays on the part of three or four of the more important stores in the block had nothing to do toward stopping the crowds en route. The trading was dull with them all, so they talked over plans to improve it.

Richards, who is a New York-E. J. Richards, who is a New York-er, and who conducts a hat store, ef-fectively advertised as "The Lid," sug-gested they form an advertising as-sociation and call it the "Three Hun-dred Club." The twenty-six merchants present represented all the store own-ers in the three hundred block on East Twelfth street, so the name was appropriate.

They subscribed to a contract, which

They subscribed to a contract, which tied them up for two years, to spend not less than five dollars each week in general publicity plans.

The first thing they did was to clad a street sweep in a white duck uniform, remove all rubbish, signs, displays, etc., from the sidewalks, and start a general clean-up in the street. Then the windows of the stores were touched up with lighter shades, were touched up with lighter shade an electric company was ordered to install an arc light in the street every install an arc light in the street every fifty feet, and a great electric sign "300" was suspended in the middle of the street at each end of the block. The merchants combined in taking a half page advertisement in the newspapers offering special bargains. The club adopted the ginger snap as its trademark, and ginger snaps are given free to every customer a buge ginger snap hangs in every window in the block. Every merchant and every clerk wears a ginger snap button. They use ginger snap botters on their ads.

They use ginger snap botters on their ads.

One of the features is a "hunt for gold" every Saturday afternoon in which several hundred boys join. A ten-dollar and two five-dollar gold pieces are given to the finders of certain yellow slips of paper hidden some place along the block.

"The plan is winning friends for the block," said Mr. Richards to a Printers' Ink Reporter: "We have not spent over $500 in advertising and we have secured thousands of dollars' and Times.

worth of publicity in the paper due to our novel plans. If our plan of street cleaning and keeping our stores neat and clean are pursued throughout the city, this will be a model town. Watch that auto coming down the street. When it hits the three hundred block do you note the absence of dust trailing in behind? That is because we have all the dust swent out of the way. Our plans attract women, especially, who enjoy shopping in a clean district."

So much attention has the "Three Hundred Club," attracted that merchants all along the streets are adopting the plan and now they wish to make Broadway. heretofore a well travelled thoroughfare, but a poor trading place, the "Great White Way." Merchants for ten blocks along the street are joining in the plan to have fifteen or twenty are lights installed in each block, to employ street sweepers and window cleaners to keep the streets and walks and windows clean.

The three hundred block is to be imitated in a few weeks by the six hundred block on the same street, and by another block just around the corner from the three hundred block on McGee street.

The Prince of Wales.

The Prince of Wales.

The ornate splendors of official cere mony do not show him off to decided advantage as they do his father, the King. He is in some details of disposition and temperament a reversion to his tivated, earnest and noble man. a devoted husband and an enthusiastic reformer in all affairs related to the public good. But he is less well versed in science and in literature and in no sense can he be called an accomplished musician. To sum up this aspect of the Prince of Wales he may be said to stand ton a very high plane morally and to be mediocre intellectually. He has perfect patience, a valuable quality, it is hinted in one united to so impetuous, not to say excitable, a nature as that of her Royal Highness the Princess.
