Sea urchins have a jolly time, They sing Nep-tunes all day. They play upon the trumpet fish And feed sea cows with hay. They make octopusses mew By pulling on their tails, And then, when mother slaps them, they Give way to doleful whales.

They watch the starfish act in plays, And clap their clammy hands.
The mussels on their brawny arms
Stand out like iron bands.

At night, when pallid moonfish gleam, In sleep they close their eyes, And when the morning comes they all Can watch the sunfish rise.

If they swear like the devilfish,
In picker'ell they'll burn,
But if they learn to school themselves,
To angel-fish they'll turn.
