vince within the last ten years, and the public will welcome anything in the way of an attempt to bring any one of the perpetrators to justice.

The publication of the story in the Times on Saturday revived remarkable interest in a case that was long ago given up by the public as hopeless of solution, and, which was almost forgotten. Not since the Kinrade mystery in the spring has a crime been so much discussed. The papers were eagerly purchased and the Times was obliged to run off two extra editions to meet the demand. The general concensus of opinion on the street and in circles where the murder was discussed was that the story is well worth investigating.

SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED.

SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED. SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED.

The story told by Acting Detective Barrett is one of the strongest points in support of the possibility of the theory being correct. The local police have always held the opinion that the Barton murderer, who was undoubtedly a stranger to the district, could not have selected the spot where he murdered his victim, at random. Everything pointed to the man having chosen the scene of the crime before hand. This belief is supported by the fact that the man and woman went direct to the spot, and, that the murderer, after the crime, and, that the murderer, after the crime. and, that the murderer, after the crime, knew how to reach the Caledonia road by way of the cross road, to avoid re-turning by the road he and the woman used to walk out.

The first clue as to the appearance of the Barton murderer and his victim being in the city, was unearthed by the Times. It showed that the pair were at the Commercial Hotel on Saturday evening, October 7th.

This story was confirmed when Maggie Ayers, a dining-room girl, positively identified the body of the murdered woman, as having been in the diningroom with the man. The man and woman, it will be recalled, went driving on Sunday, and it was suggested that he chose the spot for the murder at that time.

Is it not more probable, however, that he was over the ground by himself before Saturday, October 7? Is it not reasonable that the man Barrett spoke to might be the murderer, who was deciding that day on the place where he would commit the crime and that he went to the Falls or some place that the standard maning the content of the standard maning the standard man that he went to the Falls or some place that night or Saturday morning to meet the woman? Is it not a peculiar co-incident that a stranger, answering the murderer's description should be seen on the mountain the day, before the tragedy, carefully inquiring about the different roads and the layout of the district?

Perhaps the strongest point in the story now advanced is the fact that the only available clues afforded by the dead woman's wearing apparel show that she must have been in Philadelphia or New York. It will be recalled that William Wells, a private detective, who succeeded in locating the maker and wholesaler of the "Foot Queen" shoes, also followed up the corset clue, and established the fact that they were manufactured in Newark, N. J., and manufactured in Newark, N. J., and sold in Gimbel Bros.' store in Philadel phia and Milwaukee. The shoes were said to have been sold in a little store said to have been sold in a little store on New York's east side. The whole-saler of the shoes informed the Pinkerton detectives, employed by the Ontario Government, that the particular pair of shoes the woman wore were undoubtedly purchased in this little store. Detective Wells had a theory that the girl might have worked in the Newark corset factory, where the corsets were made. Efforts were made to identify her there, but no one seemed to remember ther. This was some time after the crime.

The local police had a theory that the Barton victim had been identified by her relatives, who refused to come forward because of the disgrace. They formed this opinion because of the publicity the crime was given. They were that the come was that it has identified the crime was given. onfident that some one must have iden-

Impressed with the fact that there were many features in the two crimes, strikingly similar, it set out to make an impartial investigation. semblance.

The fact that Mueller, who, the New The fact that Mueller, who, the New York police say, served a term under another name for forgery and perjury, in Sing Sing prison, was not released until August 11, 1905, may be seized upon as one of the weak points of the story, in view of the fact that the Barton victim was enciente. This, however, does not necessarily preclude the possiloes not necessarily preclude the possi bility of the theory being correct.

The chief drawback to sending anyone to New York to try and identify Mueller is the fact that he shaved his moustache off when he suspected that the police were on his trail for the Islip crime. It hardly likely that any of the people though some of them declare that they could tell the man's carriage and walk. AN INTERNATIONAL BAND.

Orroner Savage is working in conjunction with the New York police, and firmly believes he has in his custody one of the most remarkable criminals ever arrested. It is his opinion from what he has already learned in the course of his investigations that the prisoner is a member of an international band who of an international band who investigations that the prisoner is a member of an international band who make a practice of marrying women for a consideration, then robbing and deserting them. The band, according to the Coroner, found most of its victims among the immigrant servant girls who save their wages only to finally lose them when they try to exchange them for a husband and a home.

The police are working on the theory that there may be a busis of truth in this statement made by Mrs. Mueller, after her husband's arrest:

"One morning I said to him: Fred, what makes you cry out such wild things in your sleep?' Instantly he was like a wild man, . He seized me by the throat, threw me against the wall and cried out: What was it I said—tell me.' I lied to him, for I was frightened. He

THE BROOKFIELD CRIME.

The Brookfield, Mass., murder of which Mueller is suspected was committed on the night of Jan. 9, 1896, three months before he was sent to Sing Sing prison, refuting the theory that he was in prison at the time. The Brookfield police believe that the Islip prisoner committed these murders.

On the morning of Jan. 19, 1896, Francis O. Newton, a well-to-do farmer, his wife and their sixteen-year-old daughter Elsie were found murdered in their sleeping rooms. At that time a German who called himself Paul Mueller was in the employ of Newton. After the murders he was missing. He was traced to West Brookfield, where he had taken a train for New York. It was believed that the man killed the Newtons in their rooms while they were asseep.

The Brookfield police have looked the description of the Mueller who is wanted there and it tallies closely with that of the man under arrest for the

GEBHARDT'S DENIALS.

The New York police believe that when Gebhardt's entire record is uncovered it will be ered it will be found that he had many victims. They believe that he robbed such as he could get the money from without ceremony, and that where the without ceremony, and that where the ceremony was performed he put his vic-tim out of the way if she proved trouble

They base this belief on the statement of Gebhardt's Astoria wife that, when she refused to deed 10 lots that were in her name over to him, he beat her terribly and told her that he would kill her. Contrary to reports, Gebhardt has made no confession to the effect that he married the three women whose names were given as Marie Katz, of 21 Ashland place, Brooklyn; Emma Schroedor, of 1,893 Seventh avenue, and Mrs. Muller of 923 St. Nicholas avenue. He stands by his original statement that the only women he ever married were Anna Luther, his present wife, Anna Meinke, of Astoria, and the woman who was his wife when he was sent to Sing Sing, in 1896. He says he never heard of the other women named. They base this belief on the statemen

INSANITY DEFENCE.

I think Gebhardt's sole idea is to lighten his sentence as much as possible," said Coroner Savage yesterday. "He thinks he has done enough in the confession line to impress the court favorably by his frankness and now he's keeping his own counsel. We have forced acknowledgment from him in several cases where he had at first made denials, and I think it is reasonable to as. nials, and I think it is reasonable to as sume that we might get him to change other statements as well. I see no evidence of insanity, and if, as reported he decides to put up that plea, I fear he will have difficulty in proving it to the satisfaction of a jury. "There seems so far to be no evidence that in his career he was actuated by anything more than a lust for money that in his career he was actuated by anything more than a lust for money. His game has been to pick up these women through matrimonial bureaus, get their money and then desert them. "It is a noticeable fact that all the women he has tried this game on have been servants, and he has shown great intelligence in the way he has engineered the proceedings. He has stated in the hearings that the matrimonial bureaus have been responsible for all his troubles."

GEBHARDT IS DEFIANT.

Stolidly indifferent and without speaking a word during the entire procedure, Frederick Gebhardt, alias Otto Muelleh, self-confessed murderer of Anna Luther, was formally charged in the Town Hall at Islip with first degree murder. As the warrant was read to him his lipcuried in a sneer and he placed his head on his hand and grinned. Not one did did he look at his wife or two children, although they were seated within three yards of him.

In the crowd of Islip residents who viewed Gebhardt there were more women than men. They strained their necks in an effort to get a clearer view of the prisoner. As he entered the court room many of the women stood on chairs. So unruly did the crowd become that Coroner Savage twice threatened to clear the room.

Gebhardt was more defiant than ever
