Your Neighbor's Patriotism.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

War is a stimulus, an exaggerator, an intensifier of both good and evil. It intensifies virtues and it intensifies faults. A particularly common example of this latter kind of intensification is the increased activity of the person who is always afraid someone else isn't doing his or her duty.

In former times this consciousness concerned itself with all his neighbors' varied obligations, but today it is poured into one channel—the sense of responsibility for his neighbors' relation toward the war.

The natural result of such a concentration of diffused energies, is to produce a very turbulent force.

When the War Lasts Much Longer She Will Be Worn Out. I have a neighbor who belongs to this class. If the war lasts much longer I am afraid she will be worn out, her vicarious conscience keeps her in such a state of moral indignation.

She is continually disturbed about someone who isn't doing his or her duty. For instance, she cannot see how the S-s can bear to spend so much money eating in expensive restaurants at a time like this.

Again, she wonders at Mrs. R—who is not willing to let her son volunteer.

She is Afraid Mr. M. Is Trying To Escape His Income Tax. And she has the most serious kind of doubts as to whether Mr. M. isn't trying to escape part of his income tax.

Can it be that her circle of friends below the average of patriotism? Or can it be her conceptions of patriotism are exceptionally high?

Not the latter, if one is to judge by her own rather mediocre contributions. As I read this over, I feel inclined to tear it up.

Not because I have done my neighbor an injustice. I don't think I have. But because I am afraid that those who read will see in my neighbor someone who has criticised them and will feel justified.

One Person Whom You Ought to Keep Patriotic.

That isn't what I want. I want you to look in and not out, and kill whatever germ of this spirit there is in you; for though we are not all so bad as my neighbour, I think many of us have this tendency to take out some of our patriotism in criticism of others. You remember what Stevenson said about his duty to his neighbour—"One person I have to make good myself." Is it not equally true "one person I have to make patriotic—myself"?

After you have done that job thoroughly, you may talk to others, if you will, but your example will already have done more than words could do.

Dear Sirs—I can recommend MINARD'S LINIMENT for Rheumatism and Sprains, as I have used it for both with excellent results.

Yours truly,
T. B. LAVERS,

Canadian Shipbuilding.

In addition to a large number of small schooners, ocean vessels, with an aggregate capacity of 450,000 tons, will be constructed in Canada during the present year. Included in the estimate are 69 steel ships having a total capacity of 290,000 tons, and 53 wooden ships with a total of 160,000 tons. The Atlantic coast ports are now building 17 steel vessels and 14 wooden vessels; the Great Lakes shipyards, 27 steel vessels and 4 wooden vessels; and the Pacific Coast yards, 15 steel vessels and 35 wooden vessels, with another order for 32 wooden vessels of 3,400 tons each. The Government shipbuilding programme contemplates a total expenditure of some $12,000,000 to the end of the fiscal year. The large steel ship-building plant to be established at Halifax, Nova Scotia, will shortly be commenced, and it is anticipated that within three months the keels of three 10,000 ton steamers will be laid on the building berths. The site has a water frontage of 2,500 feet, and the shipyard when completed will be one of the finest on the American continent, and capable of constructing vessels of 18,000 tons. Between three and four million dollars will be expended and 3,500 hands employed.—Empire Review.

THOSE WHO GET NO FAME

Not all shall rise to fame,
Not every soldier there
Shall hear the world's acclaim,
Or win a cross to wear.
Thousands in France shall star
Lunged through every east
And give their native land
Their noblest and their best.

Headless of fame they'll give
All that they have and are—
Dying that truth shall live,
Serving as posts afar,
Tolling at bitter tasks,
Lost in war's dreadful maze,
Doing what duty asks,
Uncherished by pomp or praise

Glory exalts the few;
Many must miss her smile,
Tolling the long days through
Doing the work worth while.
So to the throngs of those
Serving till danger's past,
My feeble tribute goes:
God grant them fame at last.

Pumpkins keep best in a dry atmosphere at about 50 degrees. Table-scraps are more useful for hens than to a worthless dog. Cat hammocks are the oldest form of bread, and still one of the best. The first sign of wear and tear should bring out the mending basket.

No Negotiated Peace.

(From the New York Times.)
Some of our readers and good friends have very evidently misunderstood a recent editorial article published in these columns. If there was in that article any warrant for the impression that this newspaper has in the slightest degree changed the attitude it has consistently maintained from the beginning of the war we wish to disclaim absolutely any purpose of that nature; if such an idea did anywhere find lodgment, it should be dismissed forthwith as contrary to every purpose and policy in this war which The Times has sustained and does sustain.

The Times regarded the Austrian proposal as a confession of defeat, we construed it as an offer to surrender. If we erred, it was in putting that construction upon the invitation from Vienna, for that was the foundation of our comment. It is very evident that Washington did not accept that construction, the country does not accept it. This lends confirmation to what we said in the beginning of this article, that the reputations of the Teutonic Powers is so bad that even when they want to surrender the world believes they are shamming. For this they can blame only themselves and they must realize that further humiliations and more explicit terms of surrender will be demanded, with guarantees. Construing the note as a surrender, we entertained the belief that the proposal might be considered, but only on the principle long ago laid down by President Wilson, that the result should make it everlastingly sure "that this agony must not be gone through with again." We declared that was "the foundation principle." The article continued:

A peace that left Germany master of the East would be a crime against ourselves and our posterity. Over the lands of the Near East and the whole of the old Empire of the Czars she can be permitted to have no domination. Control of vast regions where she could renew her now diminished might she must once and for all time renounce. The restorations and reparations to be decreed in the west are equally indispensable, but reiteration has made them familiar. It is in the East that the new danger will arise, there with iron resolution it must be destroyed.

This is the very substance of the conditions reported by The Associated Press to have been "authoritatively" laid down at Washington as preliminary to any discussion. Washington proposes them as conditions to be imposed beforehand, a suggestion which The Times had made in advance of any knowledge of the statement from the National Capital. That we should have been misunderstood in a matter of so great importance is regrettable, and we desire to remove the misunderstanding by the unequivocal declaration of the firm belief we have always held that no peace should be made with our enemies save on the principle laid down by President Wilson. There can be no negotiated peace.

Early Closing.

It is probable that an order will be issued in London providing that during the Winter months all shops shall be closed at four o'clock in the afternoon, with the exception of those which sell food, tobacco, newspapers and the like. Many shops close at four o'clock, but the saving of heat and light for an extra hour and a half in respect of thousands of shops is a matter of no small importance in England.

Milady's Boudoir

The effect of pretty brows and lashes add a positive charm to a plain woman. One poet compared a woman's eyebrows to 'litle' feathers. Nothing gives the face such a vacant expression as the lack of arched brows, on the human face. Some folks would laugh and say that it is easy enough to blacken them with a brush or pencil.

Fencing the brows to make them appear thick and dark is unsatisfactory, however, for no matter how artistically the work may be done it will surely show upon close inspection.

And don't neglect the very necessary duty of anointing your head with oil. Vaseline has a way of penetrating to the roots themselves, and helps to refill the little oil sacs which nourish the hair. But in rubbing it on be sure you only take a little vasoline on your finger at a time, and rub it in the scalp itself allowing the smallest amount possible to touch the hair itself.

Eyes are supposed to be the 'windows of the soul, whether or not a beautiful pair of eyes really tell soul truths is another matter, but bewildering and mischievous glances shot through a silk eyelash fringe have made history.

Your eyebrows need brushing every day as well as your hair, although, of course, dust and dirt are washed from them every time you wash your face. However, the blood circulation under the brows need stimulation, so buy a little doll's toothbrush with stiff bristles and use it several times a day. Be careful not to spread the brows when brushing them, for no woman wants them to grow bushy and wide. Always brush toward the center of the eyebrow.

JOHN BARLEYCORN.

John Barleycorn, my Jo, John, since nations had their birth, you have, with beastly arrogance, infested this old earth. But now you see your finish, John, and many sit you throw, the bells are tolling knells for you, John Barleycorn, my Jo. This war has slain its millions, John, and many more must die, but you have killed far more than war, with your old gin and rye; the men who fall on battlefields our prayers and blessings know, but those you slay must die in shame. John Barleycorn, my Jo, John, your tricks cannot avail; you cannot set aside your doom by blowing in the kale; nor can the tears of crocodiles which down your whiskers flow avert one hour the bitter and shroud, John Barleycorn, my Jo. 'Twill be a better world, John, when you've removed your sign, when you no longer poison men with tangle-foot and wine; for every plunk you handle is the price of pain and woe, Barleycorn, my Jo. You've wearied all the world, John, you've tried the souls of men, and when you chase yourself away you won't come back again; you're letting go by inches, John; but you will have to go, and so skidoo and fare thee ill, John Barleycorn, my Jo.
