A WALKING TRIBUTE.

By RUTH CAMERON.

There is in a certain little town I sometimes visit a tribute to the way in which the camp life in this war has been conducted. It is not a written tribute or a printed tribute; it is a living, breathing tribute that works in the little country store and walks the streets.

Isn't it the least a Sissy.

face was gone. Sir Galahad was still Sir Galahad. Often as I walk about the little town I meet him, and whenever I do, something tightens in my throat and I wish that the men and women who fought to make the camps of this year's war different from what it was always held camps of war had to be, could see this living tribute to their work.

Milady's Boudoir.

THE USEFUL HANDKERCHIEF.

"Sometime ago Marie," began Marie as she tripped into her aunt's home bright and early one morning. "You told me some decorative and useful things to make out of handkerchiefs. Couldn't you give me a few more hints on the same subject?" "Why I guess so," answered Marie. "There are many pretty articles you may make out of handkerchiefs. For instance in your room and your guest room why not have a pretty bureau cloth to match the general coloring of the room, made from small handkerchiefs.

"These handkerchiefs must be the small, women's handkerchiefs. Take four and join them together with a lace insertion. Put a row of the handkerchiefs at the entire edge after the handkerchiefs are joined together and then whip on to this insertion a lace edge to match.

"The smaller handkerchiefs make pretty little pincushions. Place buttoned eyelets an inch or so in length about the inside of the border. A small bow of the ribbon, which ribbon should be about an inch in width is placed in end of the cushion.

"Bordered handkerchiefs make nice oversleeves for either the business girl or the little school girl. One handkerchief will make two sleeves. The raw edge which is hemmed neatly, is used to go about the wrist.

The half of the handkerchief is then folded in two, so that the hemmed edge is at the bottom. A seam is run up the handkerchief so that the sleeve is the right side for the arm. This leaves an ornamental point at the top which can be worn under the arm on the top merely for decoration.

Scapa Flow.

WHERE THE HUN NAVY IS INTERRED.

I have my revenge at last. For four long winters I have been based on Scapa Flow, a harbour in the Orkney Islands large enough to hold the fleets of the world, and now the German High Seas Fleet, which has kept me at Scapa during what should have been the best four years of my life, is to be interned there itself.

Scapa is known by the Navy as "the last place on earth"--but it is really only in the midst of winter that this title is deserved. Then there are only about seven hours of daylight, and, owing to the rough sea, communication with the shore more or less ceases.

When the better weather arrives, parties are landed from the ships for recreation on the various islands. On the island of Flotta, the officers and men of the Grand Fleet have made a first-rate self-course of eighteen holes, and this is the chief attraction at Scapa. This island also had several football and hockey grounds.

Gardening Difficulties.

Several ships have cultivated plots of land on the island of Farn, and have quite useful vegetable gardens. Unfortunately, however, the ship sometimes leaves for another port just when its best produce is waiting to be gathered, and on its return is perhaps nicely ready for next year's seed.

In the early days of the war men were much inconvenienced by having nowhere to shop, but in 1915 the S.S. Borodino was chartered by the Junior Army and Navy Stores, who started a floating branch of their establishment at Scapa. This ship had not come as a blessing to the Fleet, for she contained a laundry and a hairdressing saloon, and in the shop were to be purchased all manner of articles and luxuries which help to comfort those who "go down to the sea in ships."

The after-hold of the S.S. Gourko, a provision-ship and sister of the Borodino, was early in 1916 turned into a theatre, so that while in the daytime the Gourko carried on provisioning the Fleet, at night she was able to lay alongside any warship requiring accommodation for a concert.

Our surgeon will always have a good word for Scapa; for its air is most bracing, and with the climate slightly warmed by the Gulf Stream, it might be called a health resort.

Our three Specials: Stafford's Phoratorne, Pres. A., and Liniments also Ginger Wine, are sold at Robert Parsons', 7 Hayward Ave. Jan 11, 19.

Curliana.

The Curliars will be kept busy this week, ice permitting.

To-night at 8 o'clock, several candidates will be balloted for.

Tuesday the Jubilee Medal will be played for in a Point Game, (open to all).

Wednesday, Mr. F. W. Hayward's four prizes will be played for, afternoon and night. This last game ought to prove a very interesting one, as nearly all the Curliars can compete and no doubt all will take advantage of it.

Mr. F. W. Hayward's four prizes will be played for on next Wednesday, February 12th, afternoon and night. The game to be played as an ordinary scratch game. Each player as he enters the rink will place his name on the blackboard. The eight names so placed will select and arrange their teams.

The Week's Opera.

A very interesting and enjoyable evening is in store for the spectators of "Princess Ju Ju" to be staged in the Casino on Wednesday and Thursday nights by the pupils of the Conservatory of Music. Some ex-pupils will also take part, and nothing has been overlooked in trying to make the play a success, and the dances, costumes and all else in connection have been most carefully arranged and rehearsed, while the orchestra as advertised is proof positive that the musical arrangements will be everything desirable.

POST MORTEM.

Men skimp and save until the grave has got them in its keeping; they plant and sow in toll and woe for heirs' and lawyers' reaping. "I can't afford to step aboard a ship and visit Parry," says a Farmer Jones, who has more bones than any man could carry. "I'd like to see the world," says he, "I'd like full well to travel; but saving dimes for wintry times just keeps me scratching gravel." Some day he dies, worn out he lies, by hard work beaten under; and lawyers stand on every hand and look around for plunder. He's left his wad and gone abroad across the silent waters; and every bone he had is blown by spendthrift sons and daughters: For bonds and stocks and dust and rocks a dead man has no vision; no passing soul can take a roll into the fields Elysian. We live but once and he's a dunce who gets no fun from living, who always saves and never takes the joy of spending, giving. The wise man salts in fireproof vaults a portion of his treasure, then takes the rest and goes a-quest for eighteen kinds of pleasure. He puts a plunk in his tin trunk, then takes another dollar and paints the town a reddish brown and makes the peelers holler.
