"BETTER THAN THE BEST."

"Sleep on, brave soldiers, sleep—
Where the poppies grow,
Sleep on brave soldiers in your places,
Row on row."

"The torch you hung to us, we caught;
With blistering hands we bravely fought
To hold it high, to guard you through
The night,
And to the dawn to guide you to the light,
When you awake from Flanders' fields."

What sad yet glorious memories are awakened by the thought of Beaumont Hamel—that fatal day on which the gallant battalion of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment crimsoned a stricken field with their life's blood; willingly gave their all engaged in a forlorn hope. Yet not perhaps forlorn, for who can say that nothing was gained on July 1, 1916, when the gallant men of the Ancient Colony measured strength with the professional soldiers of Germany and proved themselves in courage and bearing superior to the men of Prussian blood and iron. They died heroically facing, ever bravely, a deadly hail of German steel, but was their sacrifice fruitless? Was there not something sublimely noble in their bearing as they attempted the impossible—something that communicated itself to those who came after them and filled their places in the gaps made by Prussian shell and shrapnel and machine gun? These are questions for the psychologist, but in our inmost hearts there is a feeling that our men did not die in vain, that their offering of precious life made the freedom which we possess infinitely dearer and more to be valued. They counted not the cost, but at the order "Newfoundlanders Advance!" they swept over the top and across the area between them and the enemy positions, with death everywhere—but not one of them faltered. Do or die was their motto, and having failed of their objective they died and in their death victory was eventually won.

"When can their glory fade?" Not while sea-girt Newfoundland remains in the mind of its inhabitants "a gem of the ocean." Not so long as a wave beats upon its rock-ribbed shores. Not, indeed, while Terra Nova holds her place in the British Empire will the deathless glory of her gallant sons who fell in the Battle of Beaumont Hamel be forgotten or relegated to a secondary place in memory. For ever, while the wind blows and the bird flies and the tides of the sea ebb and flow, so long will the day bring to us and our successors living yet sad thoughts of sons, brothers, husbands and sweethearts who failed not in the hour of trial; who so ably and splendidly upheld the honor and tradition of Britain in the hour of darkest gloom. "Better than the Best!" What more dignified distinction could be bestowed upon the men of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, who essayed the impossible and all but succeeded. How better can their memory be enshrined and their daring and heroism handed along to coming generations than by setting apart the day of their sacrifice in annual commemoration of the deeds which made them famous. True, every ceremony, every reference will sadden some hearts, whose wounds time has yet unhealed, but in the remembrance there will be, ever pointing upwards, the glory untarnished and unsullied which came to the men from the land of the Caribou on that stricken field in far-off Europe where they died that the world might be free—not so much for democracy as for humanity, and in their dying bequeathed to us a duty which belongs to all Newfoundlanders, present and to come—that of remembrance. Truly Their Names Liveth for Evermore.

THOSE WHO CAME NOT BACK.
We welcome back our bravest and our best;
Ah, me! not all; some come not with the rest.
Who went forth brave and bright as any here!
I strive to mix some gladness with my strain.
But the sad strings complain,
And will not please the ear;
I sweep them for a psalm, but they wane.

Again and yet again,
Into a dirge and die away in pain.
In these brave ranks I only see the gaps,
Thinking of dear ones whom the dumb turf wraps,
Dark to the triumph which they died to gain:

Filler may others greet the living,
For me the past is unforgiving;
I with uncovered head
Salute the honored dead
Who went and who return not. Say not so!
'Tis not the grapes of Canaan that repay,
But the high faith that failed not by the way;
Virtue treads paths that end not in the grave;

No ban of endless night the exiles brave,
And to the saner mind
We rather seem the dead who stayed behind.
Blow, trumpets, all your exultations blow!
For never shall their aureoled presence lack;
I see them muster in a gleaming row,
With ever youthful brows that nobler show;
We find in our dull road their shining track;

We feel the orient of their spirit glow,
Part of our life's unalterable good,
Of all our saintlier aspiration;
They come transfused back,
Secure from change in their high-hearted ways,
Beautiful evermore, and with the rays
Of morn on their white Shields of Expectation!

Transatlantic Telephony

We understand that the representatives of the Marconi Wireless Telephone Company will start operations on Signal Hill to-morrow, the object being to open up communication across the Atlantic with the station in Ireland. We have been informed that already communication by wireless telephone has been successfully accomplished in Europe to a distance of 1800 miles, and we feel perfectly sure that the success will attend their efforts from Newfoundland to Europe. Nature has placed historic Signal Hill in the proper position as the chief wireless station between the two continents. We hope to be in a position to give fuller particulars in a few days. Already communication has been successfully established between running trains in England.

Forest Fires Cause Great Destruction.

The forest fire at Mobile was reported as having burned down somewhat this morning. A lot of destruction was caused by the blaze and many of the residents lost all they possessed. The section house near the railway station, Reid's farm, many dwellings and a boat in the harbor were destroyed. The south side of Witless Bay was threatened but by concerted effort it is believed that the place will be saved.

A forest fire of big proportions is also reported at Briggs Junction, and at Manuels, near Witch Hazel Pond, a fire has also broken out. A report was received yesterday saying that a serious fire was in progress at Hant's Harbor, T.B., and burning towards Winterton. At Chelsea, seven dwelling houses and eight barns, with their contents were destroyed, the owners—Layden, Baileys and E. Harris—losing heavily. The latest report said the situation looked very serious.

Drought Affects Hay Crop.

The drought and high winds during the past weeks are having a serious effect on the hay crops. If this dry weather continues it is estimated that the harvest will be little better than half a crop. Cows on pasture are going short on their milk and many farmers are obliged to supplement the grazing with hand feed.

McMurdo's Store News.

WEDNESDAY, June 30, 1920.
We have just got in a new lot of Celluloid Goods, Mirrors, Military Hair Brushes, Nail Brushes, and a few toilet sets. They are, for this class of goods, very moderate in price, and can reasonably be said to be remarkable value for the money asked. We should be glad to have you see them.

If you are going out of town to-morrow, don't fail to take some mosquito-dope with you. One of the best protectives is our Citronella Oil, put up all ready for use. It does not smart or in any way injure the skin of face and hands. Price 25c. a bottle.

And yet, I'll bet he was never afraid,
And he was as the best of 'em go;
For his hand was clenched to his broken sword
And his face was turned to the foe.

A fool! Ah, no! He was more than wise—
His was the proudest part.
He died with the glory of faith in his eyes
And the glory of love in his heart.

And though there's never a grave to tell,
Nor a cross to mark his fall;
Thank God! we know that he "batted well"
In the last great game of all.

Forest Fire Destroys Houses.

All yesterday a forest fire of large proportions raged in the vicinity of Tor's Cove and Mobile. Several houses and a large patch of timber were destroyed. The following message was received last night by Inspector General Hutchings from Constable Fahy of Bay Bulls: "Have returned home, fire under control, house and barn burnt at Mobile." The Road Nod. Co. had a wire at 6.30 from the operator at Tor's Cove, as follows: "Settlement still surrounded, station not burnt yet, think out of danger, section house and some others burnt at Mobile, fire coming down South Side of Tor's Cove; not much danger." The church at Tor's Cove was in danger, but it was expected would be saved. Rev. Father Maher on his way to Ferryland in his motor car, could not get beyond Witless Bay. Rev. Father Coady and Hon. Dr. Campbell were also held up at this point.
