Names and Phrases.

It has been pointed out that family names after originated in the occupation of a member of the family. The use in which the family lived also is source of many of our modern surnames. A man, for example, who lives on a hill was known as "John who lives on the hill" and in time the appellation crystallized into a regular family name. But the Anglo-Saxon hill was hove or hough or huff, and these words have been preserved in the names Howe, Hough and Huff.

"House" in the olden days was an ordinary house but what we would call a mansion and consequently the person who lived in the extra "house" came to be so named. Surnames are Mathus, mathouse; tions loft-house.

The mediaeval English were very liberal in their naming of colors; things dark was "black," anything light might be "white." Now an acre usually an cultivated land, and laid upon which the harvest appears "white" was called whiteacre or whiter. From this springs our modern names Whittaker, Whiteacre, Whitefield, Whitefield and other variations.

Mosque Built by Kaiser.

A reminder of the time when the Emperor William attempted to be a leader in the Moslem world was at Wuensof, Germany, in form of a Mohammedan mosque which was erected by the Kaiser in the first years of the World War. It had a hundred orthodox adherents of teachings of the Koran regularly ship in it. It is the only mosque in Germany and William II. built it for the benefit of the Cossack and this Tartar war prisoners who were captured while serving with the Austrians and French. An internment camp surrounds it. Under the law of the Koran the mosque must never be destroyed. There has been considerable criticism of the former Emperor having erected it and for the present Government for maintaining it. The officials declare it is their duty to give the interned Tartars an opportunity to worship according to dictates of their faith. They point that destruction of the mosque would be a serious offense in the eyes of all Mohammedans.

RIOTING IN MINING SECTION.

LONDON, April 5. Rioting broke out to-night in connection with the coal strike in Cownbeach, in Pembrokeshire, according to a Central News despatch from Dunfermline. Police attacked strikers with batons, but the strikers hoisted the red flag and besieged the police station. The situation is assuming a critical aspect, the despatch says. The trouble arose when the strikers captured an under-manager of the mine, who refused to cease manning the pumps. The police responded to the call for aid and rescued the man, but the police were surrounded by the miners, whose forces by this time had been increased to thousands.

NEGOTIATIONS TAKING PLACE.

LONDON, April 5. Private negotiations between the Government and leaders of the Miners' Unions relative to a settlement of the strike began last night, says a definite announcement by the Sketch this morning. The Daily Mail hints that Baron George Rankin Askwith was the intermediary. There were indications to-day that agreements may not be reached by the railwaymen and transport workers at the meeting tomorrow if an immediate strike is proposed. The Labor Herald asserts that large numbers of troops are being brought back from Ireland, and a Reuter's despatch states an infantry battalion has been ordered back from Mesopotamia. Students at Birmingham University have volunteered for pumping in their mine at Lyndri.

ONE RESULT OF THE STRIKE.

NEW YORK, April 5. The United States bids fair to win the English coal export trade if the present strike in Great Britain lasts any length of time, said a statement issued here to-night by the Wholesale Coal Trade Association. Foreign buyers have been much displeased by recurring troubles in British coal mines and subsequent interrupted shipments on contracts, read the statement. United States exporters are very anxious to secure this business.

THE COAL STRIKE SITUATION.

LONDON, April 5. The stoppage of all coal mining in Great Britain is an accomplished fact and the question the public is considering anxiously to-night is whether the paralysis will extend to the railways and other means of transportation and even spread among workers generally. Both Houses of Parliament discussed the situation to-day without taking any steps to relieve it. The National Transport Workers Federation conferred without reaching decision as to whether to call a strike in support of the miners. Three branches of the Triple Alliance, Railwaymen, Transport Workers, and the Miners will meet separately to-morrow, which promises to be a decisive day. The most serious feature of the position continues to be the threat of the ruin of mines by flooding. The miners took strong measures in several places to-day against the owners, who are protecting their property. There was a successful attack on the guardian of an important mine near Edinburgh, Scotland, a thousand miners marched to the pit head of the Ocean colliery in Rhonda, Wales, and successfully demanded the withdrawal of all officials working the pumps. Referees in several towns have refused applications of striking miners for unemployment pay. The four hundred delegates representing thirty-five unions and half million workers attended the meeting of Transport Federation do not always coincide, and it is reported they are considering other measures to help miners as an alternative to striking. One measure being proposed is to transport coal. Some scattering unions in other trades are asking whether they should permit the use of stored coal in factories. Reports of factories closing continue to be published, but it is impossible to estimate the extent to which the industry is suffering through the strike crisis, because temporary closing and short time have been extremely common recently. The attitude of the public and workers seemingly is that this is as good a time as any for threatening out the vital problem of reduced wages, which the employees contend is necessary if the country is to continue doing business and which the workers insist should be accomplished by gradual stages if it cannot be avoided.

Coasting From the Roof of the World.

Enos A. Mills, scientist, naturalist and traveller, in his latest book, "Waiting in the Wilderness," gives a graphic description of a climb he took into the heights where storms roar their loudest, on the very crest of the Continental Divide. Standing far above timberline, with one foot on the Atlantic slope and the other on the Pacific slope, the author looked one hundred miles out to either side of him. To the east lay the brown plain of Colorado; to the west stretched limitless snowdrifts. "What a place to coast!" exclaims the author. The very roof of the world! And coast he did, with a vengeance, as witness the following stimulating paragraph: "Wading out into the snow, I sat down on my snowshoes and away we went, coasting toward Pacific sea level. Of course I exceeded the speed limit. The smooth slope dropped nearly a thousand feet in half a mile. Toward the bottom I struck the smoothest place of all. Here was a spring that had overflowed before the snow fell and coated the slope with almost smooth ice. Over this ice alone I went like a rocket. Near the bottom it flattened out abruptly and I was shot several feet into the air over a rainbow pathway—like a football kicked for goal. . . . After twenty or thirty feet through the air I came back to earth and swept forward and downward at a hair-raising pace. One of the dwarfed little trees that barely stuck up through the snow caught into my snowshoes and away we went, the shoe was torn off and left behind on the treetop, while I tumbled head over heels into 4 feet of snow. . . . I looked back up the slope along the mark I had made. It would be sundown in about two hours and it would take about that long to climb up to the place where I had started to coast."

Millionaire Wants Divorce.

Mr. James A. Stillman, multi-millionaire and president of the National City Bank, the most powerful financial institution in America, has brought a suit for divorce against his wife, who has instituted a counter-suit against him also for divorce. She is a New York society beauty and sportswoman. Before her marriage she was Miss "Fifi" Potter, daughter of James Brown Potter and Cora Urquhart Potter. Mr. Potter secured a divorce from his wife in 1900, and she then went on the stage in London. The greatest efforts have been made by the lawyers to keep the present double action secret. It is stated that an important role in the case will be played by a two-year-old child known as Guy Stillman, for whom a special guardian has been appointed. The extraordinary nature of the charges make it probable that the case will be fought with great bitterness. It is stated that not only is the divorce issue at stake, but also Guy's right to inherit a fortune. There is an absence of mystery about the child Guy owing to the fact that the register gives the name of Mr. and Mrs. Stillman's children as Anne and James. An application was made in Court by Mr. Stillman to compel Mrs. Stillman to double her present annual allowance of $15,000. Mr. Stillman's lawyers, in opposing the application, said that his income, formerly $200,000 yearly, had been reduced to $25,000 by taxation. Mr. Stillman inherited a great fortune from his father, who was one of Mr. J. D. Rockefeller's closest financial advisers, and how built up the National City Bank's present reputation.

Gives Tanlack Credit For Splendid Health

When King George Was a Boy.

An intimate story is told of the present King George in an article in a London magazine by Mr. W. T. Marsden. As a child he was treated with less favoritism than his elder brother, the late Duke of Clarence. This, says Mr. Marsden, rankled in Prince George's mind somewhat. On one occasion the two little princes were to attend a children's fancy dress ball at Devonshire House. The Duke of Clarence was allowed to select his own costume, but King George's was chosen for him by his mother, probably because her Majesty considered the younger prince was not old enough to be given a free choice in such a matter.

King George wished to go to the ball as a pirate, but the costume selected for him was that of a court page of the sixteenth century. The Duke of Clarence selected the court garb of a French knight of the fifteenth century.

The younger prince, hurt and mortified at not being allowed to have the garb of his choice decided not to go to the ball. The princes were to leave Marlborough House at eight o'clock. When they should have begun to dress, Prince George was nowhere to be found. A prolonged and fruitless search for him followed, in which the prince's father and mother and about half the members of the household joined. The Duke of Clarence at eight o'clock left Marlborough House, and an hour later the missing prince made his appearance in his mother's boudoir. He had been hiding in a large trunk in one of the box-rooms, where he must have nearly died from suffocation. The effects on him of his confinement indeed were so obvious that when he entered his mother's boudoir he was instantly forgiven an offence which otherwise might have entailed on him rather severe punishment.

Another Lady Councillor.

Glasgow Municipal Bye-Election. A bye-election took place on Tuesday, March 15, for the vacancy in the representation on Glasgow Town Council of the Park Ward, caused by the death of Colonel J. Smith Park. The candidates were Miss Violet M. Craig Robertson, a member of the Parish Council, and Mr. William MacLure, who was for many years a member of the Town Council. Both candidates were defeated for other wards at the November election. Comparatively little interest was taken in the contest, and this was reflected in the light poll, amounting to only about 39 per cent. of the total electorate. The result was announced the same night at the City Chambers as follows:—Miss Robertson, 3098; Mr. MacLure, 1849—majority for Miss Robertson, 1159. There were 10 spoilt papers. Miss Robertson has a far-back connection with municipal and University life. There are now 6 ladies in Glasgow Town Council.—Glasgow Weekly Herald.

Teeth in the Eye.

Dr de Lapersonne has informed the French Academy of Medicine of the curious case of a young woman who, at the back of one eye, at the base of the socket, has a row of teeth, perfectly formed, which are pressing against the ball of the eye, and which were discovered by means of an X-ray photograph. Such a case has never previously been reported. As the presence of the teeth is threatening the sight of the eye, it will be necessary to extract them. The dentist's task will not be an easy one.

President United States a Mason.

Bro. Warren G. Harding, President of the United States is a Mason, and he is proving his devotion to the principles of the Craft by showing that he is animated with the desire of maintaining a feeling of good understanding with the English-speaking peoples of the world. He is no ranting demagogue, as his letter, recently written to Mr. John A. Stewart, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Sulgrave Institution will show: "The labor of uniting into still closer amity and understanding the English-speaking peoples of the world has a significance of good to all Americans and to all nations and races of the world. "Destiny has made it a historical fact that the English speaking peoples have been the instrument through which civilization has been flung to the far corners of the globe. I am impressed not so much by the glory that English-speaking peoples may take to themselves as by the profound duties that God has thrust upon them—duties by which 'restrained, tolerant and just. These duties will find their greatest recognition in a united, unshakable friendship and understanding and oneness of purpose—not for the exclusion from brotherhood of others but for a better brotherhood flowing toward others. "I believe that when the wisdom of America is summoned to assist the world in building a workable, as distinguished from a bungling, agreement of association for the prevention of war, unity of English-speaking peoples will play no small part, not to invade the rights or exclude the fellowship of other nations, but to protect and include them." T. J. PARKER
4246 Juneau Street, Seattle, Wash.

"I used to think all the Tanlack testimonials were exaggerated, but I have felt thankful a thousand times I ever believed in it strong enough to give the medicine a trial," said T. J. Parker, well-known salesman for Gately's Clothing Store, residing at 4246 Juneau St., Seattle, Wash. "Several years ago I commenced having periodic spells of sickness and a few months ago I had an attack that I thought would finish me. When I did finally get up, I was scarcely able to go. I had no appetite and what little I forced myself to eat caused so much gas on my stomach I could hardly get my breath. "At night I was often so bloated I couldn't breathe while lying down and just had to sit up and struggle for air. At times I had cramps so bad I could hardly endure it. "My liver was sluggish and sometimes I got so dizzy I would nearly fall. I felt tired and miserable all the time, couldn't even sleep and for days at a time I wasn't able to go to work. "Well, a friend of mine finally got me to try Tanlack, and it certainly has done a good job for me. My appetite is fine now and although I am eating just anything I want and as much as I please, my stomach never gives me the least trouble. I have picked up in weight, my strength has come back to me, and I am now enjoying the best of health. "All the men at the store know Tanlack put me back on my feet, and I am glad to give this statement for what it may be worth to others."

Just Folks

Babar A. Guest
HUNGEE.
I'm gettin' sort of hungry for the blossoms on the tree
An' I'd rather like to listen to the din
An' I'm lookin' for the comin' now of Little Jenny Wren
An' the mornin' when the bird house will be occupied again.
I don't feel any older but somehow it seems to me
That the winter days are longer than what once they used to be.
An' I find I'm disappointed on those April mornings when
I'm looking for the sunshine and it comes to snow again.
Oh, I want to go out fishing and I want to tramp the woods
An' I want to give up city streets for leafy neighborhoods.
An' I want the grass to walk on 'stead of white an' marble floors.
I'm tired of walls and windows and I want the wide outdoors.
