MRS. LATIMER'S LOVE

Now, this was one of those chance shots which, like the missile of an am-bushed sportsman, though aimed at a single duck, brings down a whole troop single duck, brings down a whole of wild fowl, splashing and quacking and scattering over the water. At the first scattering over the water, he youngmention of the ominous name, the young-er lady gave a little toss of her shapely head, while the elder's brow grew black as midnight; but when the supposed conquest of the hard-hearted Gilbert was conquest of the hard-hearted Gilbert was reported, a sudden change seemed to show itself simultaneously in each. John had judged, and rightly, that proud Gertrude would support him vehemently in any conquest he might make rather than be supposed capable of jealousy of a Miss Jones. But he had not calculated on Lady Olivia's speedy acquiescence in any measure which might tend to further separate the two cousins. So he was not surprised when Lady Gertrude answered quick-ure which might tend to further separate the two cousins. So he was not surprised when Lady Gertrude answered quickly, and with rising color:

"Oh, by all means, let us have her, Aunt Olivia; poor girl, it will be a charity to take her away from the savages on the other side of Oxford street, if only for one night, and to show her the manners and customs of the civilized English in the nineteenth century."
But he was a little astonished to mark Lady Olivia's frown gradually subside as he concluded his sentence. That lady, however, was incapable of granting a favor gracefully. She always seemed to think its value enhanced by the difficulty with which it was wrung from her. So think its value enhanced by the difficulty with which it was wrung from her. So the coughed ominously as she replied:
"I fear I have already exceeded my stated number, Mr. Gordon; and I do not wish my house to be quite as crowded so your friend Mrs Montpellier's."
"I know it is a great favor," said John; and I assure you, Lady Olivia, I would not have asked any one to do me such kindness but yourself."
While at the same moment Gertrude interposed eagerly:

interposed eagerly:
"Oh, pray send her a card. Aunt Olivia; "Oh, pray send her a card, Aunt Olivia; one more won't make any difference, even with our large dresses; though Charley Wing does say that every soldier occupies eighteen inches on parade, and every lady eighteen feet! Say 'yes,' Aunt Olivia, and I will write a card for Mr. Gordon in a moment.'

Thus adjured, Lady Olivia said "yes," though not very grat, usly: and so it though not very grac usly; and so it was decided that Bella Jones should be was decided that Bella Jones should be supremely blest that very night. Diplomatic John Gordon had gained his point, and that was always sufficient for John, who, like a great man of the last century, confined himself to doing one thing at one time, and did it, in consequence, effectually.

Perhaps he gained more than his point without knowing it. In the general con-thing at one time, and did it, in consequence, effectually.

Perhaps he gained more than his point without knowing it. In the general conversation which ensued, Lady Gertrude was not so talkative as usual. Neither did she indorse her aunt's invitation to a spare place in the well-known barouche then waiting at the door, an invitation the busy gentleman was compelled somewhat reluctantly to decline; but when he lingered a few moments after the elder lady's departure to prepare for her drive, Gertrude lingered, too—not because he did, of course, for she went to the writing-table in the back drawing-room, and proceeded to fill in a printed card for Miss Jones. That letters, and the day of the month requires no great effort of caligraphy, yet it took Lady Gertrude two or three minutes to accomplish her task. Then she came back to John and put the card in his hand with a little scornful courtesy, and rather a forced smile.

"Is Miss Jones really a nice person?" she asked, turning away to inspect minutely the mignonette in the window.

"Good-humored—unaffected. Yes, a very nice girl, I should say," answered John; as what else could he answer?

"And very beautiful, too, is she not?" pursued the lady.

"Many people admire her, I believe," replied he, abstractedly, and, truth to tell, somewhat tired of the subject.

"Do you think her pretty?" said Gertrude, turning round with a quick, searching glance. Rapid as it was, John's eyes met hers, and a faint blush came into his pale cheek.

"No, I can't say I do," was his reply; and the tone in which he spoke would have carried conviction to the most incredulous.

Lady, Gertrude was evidently not on terms of ceremony with Mr. Gordon, for Lady Gertrude was evidently not on terms of ceremony with Mr. Gordon, for she bounded upstairs to put on "her things," without wishing him "good-by," and a minute afterwards was singing as merrily over her toilet as her own canary bird. When she came down again, Lady Olivia was ready in the drawing-room, but Mr. Gordon was gone. If she had expected to find him there, she bore her disappointment bravely enough. Even the footman who shut up the carriage steps after her thought he had never seen his young lady look so well and cheerful—"saucy" would have been his expression had he been capable of reducing his reflections to his own vernacular—as on that bright summer afternoon. Lady Gertrude was evidently not on

And John Gordon, having inclosed and sealed up the precious document, stepped into Piccadilly to drop it into the near-est postoffice. It had cost Lady Olivia's writing table two envelopes, though, for he spoiled the first by addressing it to THE LADY GERTRUDE JONES,
"Verbena Villa,
"Regent's Park."

CHAPTER XIV. CHAPTER XIV.

The son of Peleus, flinging his shield abroad in high defiance, as it would seem, of his equestrian rival perched on the gate of Constitution Hill over against him, must have acquired ere this a degree of philosophy and savoir vivre for which he was not distinguished in the days when he sulked in his tent by the sounding sea, and chafed to hear of high-crested Hector crashing through the batle under the walls of Troy.

high-crested Hector crashing through the batle under the walls of Troy.

How many London seasons has he stood there in his naked bronze, and watched the living kaleidoscope in Hyde Park, ever varying, ever on the move, tossing its tinsel into a thousand combinations, gaudy, purposeless, and provokingly alike!

Since our fair countrywomen put him up in honor of one whose fame shall outlast his own, he has indeed witnessed some unimportant changes. He has seen Grosvenor Gate deserted for the banks of the Serpentine, and the wooden rails in the ride converted into iron; also the

the ride converted into iron; also the cality, an imitation of the French, which is, doubtless, even in our uncertain elimate, no trifling improvement. Nevertheless it has its drawbacks. Three-quarters of a mile of beauty-English beauty, too-looking its best, attired in gorgeous apparel, and drawn up sometimes even three deep, is a glorious sight, doubtless, and one calculated to inspire feelings of admiration and enspire feelings of admiration and eninspire feelings of admiration and en-thusiasm not entirely devoid of awe; but to walk composedly from end to end of such an array, is an ordeal that a bashto walk composedly from end to end of such an array, is an ordeal that a bashful man may well shudder to undergo. I should scarcely recommend an Englishman to attempt it; and to do them juritee, I have marked that my countrymed, seldom venture to run the gauntlet unsupported and alone. Damon meets Pythias, and hooks him by the arm ere he commences the promenade. Thus encouraged, he crosses the line of fire leisurely and coolly enough; but if the latter chould be suddenly seized with a fit, or otherwise incapacitated. Damon becomes instantly conscious of a total disorganization of his outward man. It seems that his clothes don't fit him, that his boots look too large and feel too small, that his hat is too tight, his gloves too loose; and that there is something irresistibly ludicrous in the expression of his profile. Hi only course is to dash at any empty hair, pay his penny, and join the ranks of the aggressors on the spot, till he can prevail on another friend to take-pity on him and tow him off. A Crimean officer, who was present at the attack on the Redan has penny, and join the ranks of the aggressors on the spot, till he can prevail on another friend to take pity on him and tow him off. A Crimean officer, who was present at the attack on the Redan, has assured me that he would rather encounter the fire that swept that deadly glacis over again, than walk solus on a summer afternoon up the right-hand side Rotten Row from Apsley House to

BOXING.

Buffalo Courier: According to advices from New York, Frank Erne has arrived in that city from England. His Buffalo friends had heard nothing from him up to a late hour last night, but they believe he will come on here in a few days, as they know of nothing that should detain him in New York. The management of the Fort Erie club is prepared to put on Erne with Mc-Partland or Art Simms at an early date, if the ex-champion is disposed to box either of these men.

Bob Fitzsimmons publishes an article telling why he will win this coming battle, writes a well-known New York fistic critic. In it he claims that he has learned a good deal from his battle with the champion. He does not tell exactly what he will do when he meets him in San Francisco, but I gather from it that he intends to depend mainly on his leg-work rather than on his hands. He saw Jim Corbett fight the champion, and he witnessed the way in which he bested him while his strength allowed. He admits that he is not as scientific as Corbett, but he claims that he is a harder hitter. Judging by what he says in this epistle I am of opinion that Bob intends employing a good real of footracing in the coming battle. He admits that he has no hope of winning this fight by clashing man to man with the champion, but he will depend on tiring him out by his leg-work. I have no doubt that by the employment of the mode of fighting he indicates he will employ, he will be able to last longer than he would by any other; but the champion may upset all of Bob's plans. He is clever on his legs himself, and though Bob may postpone the end by his tactics, I don't think he will be able to change results, and that, I believe, will be the victory of the present champion.

Poor Young Griffo is still running wild in Chicago, crazy from drink with no one to care for him, says a Chicago paper. Last Sunday morning Griff got one of his whisky fits and dashed down State street in his bare feet on the lookout for a friend to buy him liquor. A policeman nabbed him, and under threat of arrest sent him home to put on his shoes. On the way down the street Griff ran into a bootblacking stand and, being acquainted with the owner, asked the man if he would accommodate him with a shine. "Where's your shoes?" asked the boot-'Aven't got dem with me," black. replied Griff in a careless way. "Jist shine me blooming feet. It's all de same." The bootblack followed structions, and after polishing up the The Western Ontario Bowling Asso- feet of the eccentric fighter, Griffo walked away rubbing his hand over etation has issued a programme of the seventh annual tournament, to be held on the lawns of the London Rowing now," said he, "I would be all right for Sunday." He then made his way apparently contented with to a saloon, apparently contented with himself and the world at large. The poor fellow is in a pitiful plight, but even the police of Chicago find it a hopeless task to try and reform the once great featherweight, who has lost a fortune by his acts of dissipation.

as follows: "James J. Corbett, I write you thes feew lines hearing you was going to San Francisco to see the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight and challenge the winner. Now, if you will drop off at Muncie, I can get a purse of $275 for you and I for a six-round fight. I'm the tuffest man in Muncie and have beaten ten men. I weigh 167 pounds." This communication signed "James L. Tweed, 231 Shirley avenue, Munice, Ind." In reality it was written by Charles Murray, the comedian of Murray and Mack. Murray sent with it a picture of himself taken in fighting pose, and showing his features twisted into a shape which would have frightened a grizzly bear. When Corbett saw the photo he almost called murder. He at once wrote a letter to James L. Tweed, saying he would not fight a man with a face like that for the whole State of Indiana. Tweed's amazement on receiving this epistle was limitless and his indignation boiling. He indited a hot epistle to Corbett, asking why he should be insulted in such a manner and threatening to have Corbett arrested for sending scurrilous matter through the mails. When Corbett was inditing a hot retort he received a letter from Murray telling of the joke. The pugilist immediately sat down and wrote an apology to Mr. Tweed, placing the blame on the latter's funny townsmen. No blood was shed, as it happened Tweed and Murray were friends.

Edward (Kid) Carter, the Brooklyn middleweight boxer, who meets Al Weinig next Monday night in Fort Erie, like Weinig has squared all of his pugilistic losses in precisely a similar manner to Weinig, comments a Buffalo writer. It will be remem-bered that Weinig lost to Dan Creedon, to Dick O'Brien, Billy Stifft and others. But Weinig refused to be satisfied with the losses and kept after the boxers until they gave him a second trial. In every one he reversed the decision, beating the very men who previously won from him. So, too, with Carter. In February, 1900, Jimmy Judge, the Scranton boxer, was at his very best as a boxer and knocked out Carter by a fluke blow in five rounds. Carter would not stand for a refusal for a second bout, and finally Judge was compelled to give him one, with the result that Carter test. knocked the Scranton man out three rounds and a second time in three rounds. Wild Bill Hanrahan whipped Carter in May of that same year, but the second time they met the Wild Man was beaten in turn. Carter has the distinction of two victories over Walcott, winning the first one on a foul in the nineteenth round in Hartford, and beating the negro in October of last year in San Francisco. Carter is one of the best looking middleweights today in the business and is a manly young fellow in every way. If he whips Weinig on Monday game. W. Orr, of Toronto, acted as night he will sign at once for a battle with Tommy Ryan. Carter is making many friends at Fort Erie by his quiet unobtrusive deportment. He has little to say and treats all with whom he comes in contact courteously. The Kid is working earnestly and is already in fine shape. He will be well backed by Fort Erie people, the majority of whom believe he will win. Weinig is training more assiduously than he ever did before. He is box-ing more than he did in preparation for former bouts and paying much attention to clean breaks. Weinig is betting on himself, and so are his friends. He believes he will give Carter a beating.

Bob Fitzsimmons is without doubt to believe that this is correct. When Fitz fought Jack Dempsey he weighed but a little over 150 strange to say, he has taken on but a body is nothing but bone and muscle. 59 seconds. vantage of about 50 pounds over Fitzsimmons when they meet, and if Bob can overcome this big handicap and mow down the champion as he did the other big fellows, he will certainly be entitled to be called the fistic marvel of the age. "I always heard that Weinig was a game man and a bettor with his money second to no man in the country," Oxonians in turn made a final effort, said Jimmy McCafferty, the well-known Fort Erie bookmaker, "but I hold them, and lost by a short half think he was a bit rash in wagering length in time better than that of the $1,000 that he could defeat Carter. When a man is drowning his rescue is a question of timely help. It is the same thing in disease. Many a time the doctor says of a man whose condition is hopeless, "If you'd begun in time you might have been cured."

This is especially true when the disease affects the lungs. Delay is dangerous. The timely use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will result in a quick cure of deep-seated coughs, bronchitis, and weak lungs. Even when hemorrhages have been frequent and profuse "Golden Medical Discovery" as been used time and again with the result of a perfect and permanent cure. Mr. McCauley, of Leechburg, Armstrong Co., Pa., had eighty-one hemorrhages, and after other medical aid had failed he was completely cured by the use of icine just as good for "weak" lungs.

"I was in poor health when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicine," writes Mr. Elmer Lawler, of Volga, Jefferson Co., Ind. "I had stomach, kidney, heart, and lung troubles. Was not able to do any work. I had a severe cough and hemorrhage of the lungs, but after using your medicine a while I commenced to gain in strength and flesh, and stopped coughing right away. Took about six bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' then, and last spring I had Grippe and it settled on my lungs, leaving me with a severe cough. I had the doctor, but he didn't seem to help me any; so I commenced your medicine again and took three or four bottles of the 'Discovery' and two vials of Dr. Pierce's Pellets, and that straightened me up. I feel like a different person. I gladly recommend your medicine to all sufferers, for I know it cured me."

McCafferty's remarks were overheard SUNDAY SCHOOLS by Jack Sheehan at the track Wednesday, and one bet of $300 against $250 was made, Sheehan taking the Weinig end. It goes to show the amount of interest which is being taken in Monday night's bout.

Weinig is said to be working harder than he ever did in his life to get in first-class shape for Monday night's bout. He is being assisted by Warren Zurbrick and Frank Zimpfer. Weinig recently put up one of the finest private gymnasiums in Buffalo, and he is training there for his coming con-
