In such work he feels no doubt copy their naval ideas any more than at home. Lifted into an office that he was not born for, or trained for, he falls back inevitably upon his proper plane of parish "politics." Water finds its level and Mr. Crothers snatches his. There was a king chosen once to rule Poland, who sank into poor amusements such as shooting dogs in the street from his palace window. So Mr. Crothers, chosen by irony of fate to manage the most difficult of Government offices, turned to his natural work, even if he has to borrow it from Brother Pelletier. Will the Western Ontario postal service be able to go on without his providing genius? Or has he everything fixed up new for years ahead?

HOME RULE FOR SCOTLAND

That Scottish home rule will be an issue of the next general election is foreshadowed by the passage of a tentative measure for that purpose in the House of Commons by a vote of 204 to 1159. The bill outlined a scheme of Scottish self-government as a part of a wider plan for the federation of the United Kingdom. While the vote had no effect in law, it pledged the Liberal party to the home rule principle. Sir Edward Parrott states the case for it

"Not only does Scotland suffer from legislative anaemia, but she is afflicted with an almost entire paralysis of control over her administrative departments. Four years after his departure for England James VI delivered himself as follows: 'Here I sit and govern Scotland with my pen: I write, and it is done, and by a clerk in Parliament I govern Scotland now. No better description of the state of Scottish administration at the present time could be penned. The secretary for Scotland is, in the language of the comic opera, the Pooh Bah of the kingdom, the Lord High Everything Else. He has to do the work of two or three English minis ters, and the task is utterly beyond the powers of a single human being, however notable his ability and, industry.

The social side of the question cries for redress. Scotland, says Sir Edward, is bleeding white under present conditions: "Every week in the season ship-loads of the best thew and sinew in Scotland leave her shores. Since 1905 Scotland's loss by emigration actually exceeds that of Ireland. In 1910 no fewer than 58,384 Scottish people abandoned the land of their birth. At the present moment Scotland contains fewer cultivators of the soil than any other country in Europe. Denmark with half the area and a little more than half the population, with a worse soil and a somewhat similar climate, has 510,000 agricultural workers, while Scotland has but 200,000. Every year more and more Scottish land goes out of cultivation, and unless something is done, and done speedily, Scotland, outside the coal and iron area, bids fair to become little more than a local administration machinery. The

MIDSUMMER MADNESS.

Apropos of nothing particular, the Toronto Telegram suddenly bursts forth in a violent denunciation of some of the leading Liberal papers for an imaginary advocacy of French-Canadian supremacy. Listen to it:

"The abject organs of Leurierism assert the right of French-speaking Canada, not merely to express its own opinions, but to suppress any and all opinions out of harmony with the principles or prejudices of Quebec. So far as the Laurier organs could terrorize the representatives of English-speaking prejudices or principles, no issue could be raised at Ottawa, except with the consent of Quebec, no speech could be made at Ottawa except such as Quebec approves of, and no vote could be given at Ottawa of any principles or ideals other than the principles and ideals of Quebec." Why this outbreak of midsummer madness? We are not aware of any particular French-Canadian ideas that have been advocated of late by Liberal papers. A certain section of Quebec, though, we believe, a very small one, has been dominating the He went to Vancouver Island and Conservative party the past, two glanced over the scene, perhaps did try years.
