

great interest to me, and though in many cases I find replies which merely indicate that the lesson and the helps have been used, in quite a goodly proportion I meet with evidences of study and independent thought. This is to me its greatest recommendation. Our teachers all use the Leaflet and look for it."

"We do not get as many scholars to use the Leaflets as we would like, for we are convinced that it is an admirable way of promoting thoughtful study, and of enabling the teacher to know the scholar. In the classes where it is most used it has increased the interest. Our scholars always brought their Bibles as a rule, so we cannot say that the Leaflets have had much influence in that direction. They promote definiteness of teaching and study."

"The Home Study Leaflet is the best aid to both scholars and teacher that we have seen. It promotes home study. It enables the scholar to get a better grasp of the subject both in fact and detail, and impresses it on the memory."

"I am very well pleased with the Home Study Leaflet. I have no fault to find with it. I cannot see how it can be improved within the space at your disposal. I hear nothing from our teachers in the way of faultfinding."

"Our teachers are very favorably impressed with the Home Study Leaflet. I think it has promoted home study, especially the questions to be written out. It has led the scholars to bring Bibles."

"The Home Study Leaflet if rightly used, must prove helpful both to scholars and teachers, to home study and to the use of the Bible in the school. The notes and Scripture references seem very complete and accurate as well as suggestive. The skeleton maps are a fine feature."

"Home study has been promoted in all classes in which the Home Study Leaflet has been used from a small to a great degree. The fact of there being something definite to do has, we think, tended to greater interest."

"I have great pleasure in answering your questions in regard to the Lesson Leaflets. They are a success far beyond our expectations and I cannot fully express my satisfaction with them. Before we received them we could not get the scholars to study at home, but now they take a pride in it. I have recommended them to others."

"The Leaflet has promoted the home study of the lesson because the scholars have to give written answers to the questions. It has also been helpful in inducing scholars to bring their Bibles to the Sabbath School."

"In reply I would say that the Home Study Leaflet is a great improvement on that used in former years as it greatly promotes the study of the lesson at home. It leads to the searching of the Scriptures by the pupils and necessitates them to bring their Bibles to school. In conclusion I would say that it is appreciated by both pupils and teachers."

"The Home Study Leaflet not only promotes home study, but enables the teacher to understand the scholars and to see where they lack in a way in which they could not do without it."

"In reply to your postal card of the first inst. I feel pleased to say that we have used the Home Study Leaflet in our school for the past year and found it to work with great success. Our scholars fill them out very carefully and then they are given in to the teacher on Sabbath, who gives the pupils credit according to their answers. Each teacher takes a note in her class-book of the number of marks obtained and at the end of each three months each pupil knows his standing in the class. We as a S. S. find that the Leaflet has been most helpful to us and it is very much approved of by the children."

"I have consulted a number of my teachers and they confirm out of their experience my own impression that the Home Study Leaflet has helped to secure home study. Many of the scholars habitually write the answers and return them to the teachers. I would not venture to suggest any improvements, it is admirable as it is. The convenience of sending to absent or sick ones is a great advantage."

"We think the Leaflet has promoted the home study of the lesson. We also think that it has created a greater interest in the work of the class, and helped to bring out the Bible to school. We trust its influence and circulation may increase."

"It is simple and easily understood by the small classes as well as the highest."

"I beg to assure you that the Home Study Leaflet is very highly esteemed with us and I am persuaded that its faithful use will be very beneficial to our school. Two features are particularly valued viz. the fact that each scholar has work for his Bible and cannot get along without it, and secondly, the requirement finding texts to prove a certain truth."

"Our teachers are well pleased with the Home Study Leaflet which is evidenced by the fact that our subscription is renewed for another year. Most of the scholars take a deep interest in answering the questions which has promoted a close study of the lesson at home. Last year we kept a record of the marks and gave a 1st and 2nd prize in each class accordingly. It has caused most of the scholars to bring their Bibles, but it requires a lot of preaching to get some of the boys to bring theirs. Most of our scholars write the answers on a separate piece of paper."
