

THE WOLFE TONE DEMONSTRATION IN IRELAND.

Dublin, Aug. 19.—The popular demonstration in the south of Dublin on Monday, attending the ceremonial of laying the corner stone of the Wolfe Tone memorial, was remarkable for its number and enthusiasm of those attending.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.

The Irish members of Parliament walked next. They were Messrs John Dillon (chairman of the Irish party), John Redmond, T. J. Condon, David Sheehy, Alderman Eugene Cronin, J. J. Clancy, Dr. Tanner, Wm. Field, P. J. O'Brien, John Roche, P. O'Brien, M. J. Minch, and J. P. Hayden.

ROUTE OF THE PROCESSION.

The route selected for the procession was designed with the special object of taking the corners of the city in which the memorable scenes of '98 were enacted. This involved a journey through many places which nowadays are but little removed from slums, for modern Dublin has grown up in another direction.

The procession was headed by a band of the United Irishmen. On the Cave Hill, near that city, he joined hands with Russell, Neilson, and McCracken, all four pledging themselves mutually to each other never to desist until they had either freed Ireland or died in her cause.

The various deputations were marshalled in Rutland square, the four sides and the adjoining streets being utilized in the preparations. The start was made shortly after two o'clock, a body of constables discharging the difficult task of making a way through the crowded streets.

The procession was headed by a body of the Customs Band of the Irish Rifles. Foresters mounted and carrying pikets. These acted as escort to the carriage conveying the foundation-stone.

The stone was lowered by Mr. C. G. Doran, Queenstown, assisted by Mr. Quilly. Mr. O'Leary laid the stone, with a tap for America, for France, and one for each of the four continents.

COURSE OF PEOPLE UNCOVERING DURING THE TENDERING OF THE AIR.

The Chairman called upon Dr. Dillon, of Boston, who proposed a series of resolutions expressing the determination of the people to continue the struggle for freedom.

Speeches were then delivered by Mr. John McHugh (Barthust, Australia), Mr. Gillingham (Transvaal), Prof. Meols of the French Deputation, and Mr. W. B. Yeats, the dominant note being the necessity of union.

Mr. Dillon said that the man whose statue would be upon that spot was not in the heroic mould. At the hour of his death he was only a few months over thirty-five. Yet, brief though his life was, it was filled with glories for Ireland, for who could name one man who had done more for his country and its cause than Theobald Wolfe Tone had done?

THE ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN.

His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, in replying to an invitation to be present, expressed regret that he could not attend, as he always acted on the principle of not attending meetings or assemblages of a political character.

Mr. Dillon had quoted some lines from Lucien Bonaparte. He (Mr. Redmond) had been reading that speech himself the other day, and had been struck by the extraordinary prophecy that Lucien Bonaparte had made.
