CURRENT TRADE CONDITIONS.

ONTARIO.

There has been some gain in the volume of business during the past week, buying by wholesale and retail dealers being responsible for more activity. Orders for stocking up purposes are expected to be more in evidence during the next few weeks. White pine prices are not likely to recede further, and there is a probability of some advance at least on such grades as are meeting with most favor. From the standpoint of the manufacturer, conditions are satisfactory. Unsold stocks at the mills are larger than one year ago, but there is a feeling of confidence that the demand will eventually absorb the supply, whether the lumber on hand is marketed this year or next year. Mill owners will conduct their logging operations this winter with a view to restricting the production of lumber next season, and mills that are being operated day and night this year will be stocked for day runs only next season.

There is promise of a fairly brisk fall trade in hardwoods. Buyers are showing more interest and are willing to take stock whenever the slightest inducement is offered. Manufacturers generally are adhering to the prices which have ruled for the past month, and, unless general business conditions take an unfavorable turn, hardwood prices are not likely to decline. Birch is still active and there is considerable call for plain oak.
