Scientific and Sanitary.

In 1865 not a single town in India had a supply of pure water; now nearly all the large cities and cantonments have water works, with the result that the death rate among the British troops of 69 per 1,000 thirty years ago has been reduced to 15 per 1,000.

Children should have several hours of play every day in the open air, if possible. Vigorous and spontaneous action of this sort is better than gymnastics; and if girls were allowed by social custom to play as boys do they would cease to be subject to spinal defor-mities.

A man breathes fourteen pints of air per minute. Sedentary people can get all the advantages to health of a long walk or other exercise by simply increasing the rate of breathing during one or two hours a day, thus adding to the amount of oxygen that enters the lungs.

To repel train robbers, an American machinist would have a perforated steam pipe encircle both engine and tender. It would require but an instant for the engineers to open a valve, and envelope the assailants in a scalding and blinding cloud, under cover of which he could pull out and save the train.

A writer in La Medicine Modern asserts that sedentary occupations predispose to tuberculosis more than any others. Italian and English statistics show, he says, that there are 459 deaths per 1,000 from this disease among students, seminarians and young clergymen; while farmers, boatmen and mountaineers enjoy almost complete immunity from it.

Great care should be taken in administering remedies in the form of tinctures which have stood for a long time in small vials in the family medicine closet. When the bottles happen to be loosely corked the alcohol readily evaporates, leaving the drug in the form of a concentrated tincture, the pharmacopoeial dose of which might produce very serious if not fatal results.

A German chemist has discovered a mixture which possesses the peculiar property of solidifying when heated and liquefying again on cooling. The mixture consists of equal parts of phenol, camphor, and saponin, with a small quantity of turpentine. It is said that saccharate of lime in concentrated solutions also possesses this peculiar property. This mixture has been termed cryostase.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.,

18th August, 1894.

To whom it may concern—and that is nearly everybody.—This is to certify that I have used Coutts & Sons' "Acetocura" on myself, my family and hundreds of others during the past fifteen years for headache, toothache, rheumatism, sciatica, sprains, cuts, boils, abcesses, scarlet fever, chills and fever, and also with good success on myself (as I was able) in an attack of yellow fever. I can hardly mention all the ills I have known its almost magical power in curing, such as croup, diarrhea, biliousness, and even those little but sore pests to many people—corns. The trouble is with patients, they are so fond of applying where the pain is—and not where directed, at the nerve affected. And the trouble with the druggists is that they also want to sell "Something just as good," which very often is worse than useless.

Wishing you every success in your new establishment, and that a more enlightened public may appreciate the blessings of your Acetocura, is the fervent wish of

Yours truly,

CAPT. W. M. SOMERVILLE.

Late of U. S. Engineer Service, and formerly of the Marine Department, Canada.

To Coutts & Sons, 72 Victoria St., Toronto.

One of the latest applications of electricity to industrial processes is a new method for covering leather by electrical action. The hide is stretched upon a metallic table and covered, except at the edges with the coloring liquid. A difference of potential is established between the liquid and the metallic table, and the resulting current opens the pores of the skin and enables the coloring to penetrate deeply into its tissue.
