- 59 In 1993, the UN Commission on Human Rights adopted a resolution that proclaimed forced evictions to be "a gross violation of human rights" and urged all signatory states to take immediate action to bring an end to the practice (UNCHR Resolution 1993/77a). The involvement of the UN on this matter primarily occurs in situations of armed conflict, or "situations resulting in a breakdown of law and order." In situations of armed conflict, displacement and property destruction owing to forced evictions are prohibited by the Geneva Conventions (1949) and their Additional Protocols (1977).
