SYSTEM NEAR PERFECTION

Once Men Reach Port of Embarkation, They Never Lose a Meal.

By Stuart Lyon, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press.] En Route to the Front, Feb. 20.— From the port of Halifax a considerable proportion of the Canadian sol-diers now overseas have been disatched to the scene of war. Of that great host no man has been killed by accident during embarkation or by attack of the enemy en route. The men of the "silent service" have brought their ships in and taken them out of this port and others in all sorts of weather from weather, from the zero of mid-winter to the torrid heat of mid-summer without a single "scare" to lessen the mo-noting of the operations.

Their work has been greatly facilitated by the businesslike methods of the embarkation staff officer, Col. Lindsay, and his assistants. Practice has brought and his assistants. Practice has brought the system reasonably near perfection. No matter how long troops trains are delayed by snow and other troubles up the line—and the storms have been a serious handicap during the winter—the men on their arrival at Halifax never miss a meal. The officials want to send contented troops on board the transports, and a good meal makes easy embarkation.

Beyond the farewell, the operation is simple and expeditious. If the troop trains arrive closely enough together two or three thousand men can be put aboard in a couple of hours, and at the Cold feet—that is mental cold feet—are strictly taboo. The men who go on board are counted and recounted. What would happen if a thousand men at Halifax of the thousandth man turned up.

Projectiles They Have Known.

Perhaps even more interesting while we wait for our transport's complement are the stories of wounded officers returning to the front for what they all believe will prove the big final push. Those of us who have never been under shell fire listen with eager interest to stories of how various projectiles affect various people, "When anyone tells you," says a wounded westerner, so keen to get back to the front that he travels while still but partially recovered, "that he is not afraid of shell fire, do not believe him. Everyone is. I myself was afraid of solitary bullets at first, and it was only when they began to come so fast that they became a confused sound instead of an individual 'ping' that excitement made me forget."

JUST FLASH IN PAN

London, Feb. 24.—Nothing has yet been revealed concerning the reason for the arrests in Ireland of members of the Seinn Fenn and the Gaello League, beyond the brief official statement that they were made under the clause of the defence of the realm act, empowering the taking into custody of anybody whose behavior gives reasonable ground for the suspicion that he has acted or is about to act in a manner prejudicial to public safety.

The newspapers are giving little prominence to the arrests, which in a majority of instances are of quite inconspicuous persons. The Daily Mail's Dublin correspondent, telegraphs Friday, says a very calm view is being taken of the situation there, and that it would require a great effort to fan into flames any sedition which may be smoldering beneath the surface.

"The present flash in the pan," says the correspondent, "was due mainly to the astonishing result of the Roscommon election, which made a hero out of Count Plunkett, who was elected as a Sinn Feiner. Count Plunkett, however, is an aged, cultured gentleman, who has shines in the reflected glory of his son, whose tragic part in the rebellion is not forgotten. The count's large majority in the election made the Sinn Feiners delight." tery that occupied a specially warm

'SILENT" SERVICE MEN RAEMAEKERS PORTRAYS BRITAIN'S CALL FOR WAR LOAN

The War Loan in Great Britain is the biggest ever float ed, to which all classes contributed, and allotments run from five pounds to millions. Raemaekers in this cartoon shows us Britannia armed and with drawn sword uttering to the British people the famous old words, "England expects that every man this day will do his duty." But the duty in this case is to be achieved through money, rat her than through risk and sacrifice of life. And it is a duty that is being amply and generously fulfilled.
