A Bunch of Golden Keys.

A bunch of golden keys to mine,
To make each day with gladness shine,
"Good morning," that's the golden key,
That unlocks every day for me.
When evening comes "good night" I say,
And close the door of each glad day.
When at the table "if you please,"
I take iron off my bunch of keys.
When friends give anything to me,
I use a little "thank you" key.
"Excuse me," "beg your pardon," too,
When my mistakes some harm I do.
Or if unkindly harm I've given,
"Forgive me," I shall be forgiven.
O, a golden ring these keys I bind,
This is its motto: "Be ye kind."

The Parable of the Prodigal Father.

A certain man had two sons; and the younger of them said to his father, "Father, give me the portion of thy time, and thy attention, and thy companionship, and thy counsel that falleth to me."
And he divided unto them his living in that he paid the boys' bills, and sent him to a select preparatory school, and to dancing school, and to college, and tried to believe that he was doing his full duty by his boy.
And not many days after, the father gathered all his interests and aspirations and ambitions and took his journey into a far country, into a land of stocks and bonds and securities and other things that do not interest a boy; and there he wasted his precious opportunity of being a chum of his own son.
And when he had spent the very best of his life and had gained money but had failed to find satisfaction, there arose a mighty famine in his heart; and he began to be in want of sympathy and real companionship.
And he went and joined himself to one of the clubs of that country; and they elected him Chairman of the House Committee and President of the Club and sent him to Congress. And he would find him assisting himself with the hunk that other men did eat and so men gave into him say real friendship.
But when he came to himself, he said, "How many men of my acquaintance have boys who when they understand them, who talk about their boys, and associate with their boys and again perfectly happy in the companionship of their sons and will sit and go with my son; and will say unto him, 'Son, I have sinned against heaven, and I am no more worthy to be called thy father; make me as one of thy companionship.'"
And he stood and then to the very end while he was assisting himself with the hunk that other men did eat and so men gave into him say real friendship, and instead of realizing the falling on his neck, he drew back and was ill at ease.

And the father said unto him, "Son I have sinned against heaven, and I am no more worthy to be called thy father. Forgive me now and let me be your friend."
But the son said, "Not so. I wish it were possible, but it is too late. There was a time when I wanted to know things, when I wanted companionship and counsel, but you were too busy. I got the information, and I got the companionship; but I got the wrong kind and now, alas, I am wrecked in soul and body and there is nothing you can do for me. It is too late, too late, too late."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA A Good Example.

An interesting story is related in an exchange of a San Francisco woman and her physician. The doctor performed an operation very successfully upon this woman, who was quite wealthy. When asked for his bill the physician presented one for fifty dollars. The good lady smiled and said, "Do you consider that a sufficient charge, doctor?" she asked, "considering my circumstances?"
"That is my charge for the operation, your circumstances have nothing to do with it."
The lady drew a check for five hundred dollars, and presented it to him. He handed it back, saying, "I cannot accept this. My charge for that operation is fifty dollars." Very well, the lady replied. "Keep the check, and put the balance to my credit."
Some months after she received a long itemized bill, upon which were entered charges for treatment of various kinds, rendered to all sorts of humanity, male and female, black and white, who had been treated at her expense. She was delighted at it, and she immediately placed another check for five hundred dollars on her credit on the same terms, and it is now being entered in the same way.

CASTORIA For Infants and Children. The Kind You Have Always Bought Bears the Signature of

It is Canada's War.

Canada is not sending men to Europe merely to help the Mother Country, although she would cheerfully perform that service. In the war the men who go to fight will fight for Canada. What would be the fate of Canada if Germany won this great struggle. It would immediately be subjected to the Germanizing process, and we know from the history of Poland what that means. Canada would be a rich prize of war infinitely richer than any other Germany could gain, so far as material considerations are concerned. Our soldiers, then, will not be fighting for England, but with England for the preservation of the Empire and the security and the happiness of Canada. This fact cannot be too strongly impressed upon the minds of the people. There is, it is true, a still higher consideration which appeals alike to the people of the Mother Country and those of the over seas Dominions. It is the consideration of national honor, for which Belgium fought and is fighting, although the price she pays for her fidelity is beyond computation. And yet, it is better that millions perish in strife rather than that the principle of national honor cease to be a factor in the world's life. This is truly a war of civilization against barbarism, and they who give their lives in the struggle against Germany make that supreme sacrifice in the cause of humanity.

ONLY SIXTEEN, GIRL VERY SICK

Tells How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

New Orleans, La.—"I take pleasure in writing these lines to express my gratitude to you. I am only 16 years old and work in a tobacco factory. I have been a very sick girl but I have improved wonderfully since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now looking fine and feeling a thousand times better."
—Miss AMELIA AQUILANO, 881 Tchoupitoulas St., New Orleans, La.

St. Clair, Pa.—"My mother was almost insane I was troubled with excruciating and had pain in my back and side, and severe headaches. I had pimples on my face, my complexion was sallow, my sleep was disturbed, I had nervous spells, was very tired and had no ambition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has worked like a charm in my case and has regulated me. I worked in a mill among hundreds of girls and have recommended your medicine to many of them."
—Miss CORNELIA MAURICE, 110 Thwing St., St. Clair, Pa.

There is nothing that touches more human experience. Therefore, such letters from girls who have suffered and been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be a lesson to others. The same remedy is within reach of all.
If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., 233 Central Ave., Lowell, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and kept in strict confidence.

Financing at Home.

In the raising of money for domestic purposes, as well as for war expenditures, most governments now have recourse to investors at home. The British Government has never been under the necessity of going abroad for funds, and the procuring of money upon its securities does not differ in war time from the usual procedure. A relaxation of terms is the most noticeable effect of war. While France and Germany have not been lenders to the world on the British scale, both of them, particularly France, finance their national affairs at home, save in exceptional contingencies. Since the present war began both French and German Governments have sounded American sources as to the prospect of a loan, but being discouraged have turned to their domestic resources. For money need during the suspension of international borrowing Canadian Governments and municipalities must also to some extent turn to the domestic market. In the case of municipalities, the banks have been accommodators to a considerable extent. When municipal indebtedness to the banks has, however, reached a reasonable limit, further temporary financing would have to be conducted through the issue of special securities suited to the domestic market. The Ontario Government has been careful to insure this adaptability of its new million-dollar loan of five year bonds bearing five per cent. interest. Though Canada has, and in normal times will continue for many years to be a borrower of capital, yet it must in the special and temporary condition be prepared to finance more of its own affairs. The savings deposited in the banks are forty millions sicker than they were a year ago. There is no doubt of our capacity to finance our way along without trouble until conditions mend.

TREATING EPILEPSY

Plain Living Best For Sufferers From This Disease
Careful living will do more for the cure of epilepsy than a drug. The disease is characterized by loss of consciousness with severe muscular disturbance. Though, as a general statement, it is safe to say that a person who has had one of these attacks cannot be prevented from having others of the same kind, it is equally safe to say that they may be hindered by proper care.
The progress of the disease, which is naturally slow, can be greatly retarded and the violence of the attacks lessened materially.
On the physical side constipation is to be avoided. On the mental side paroxysms of emotion, such as grief, anger and melancholy are to be refrained from.
Most epileptics are useful members of society during the first ten years of their disorder, but attacks, and conditions, due to them, are very wearing on the brain.
In time the central nervous tissue is worn down and the epileptic becomes a burden to himself and to those around him.
Freedom from drugs, plain diet, an alcoholics and an even, everyday existence are the simple aids to which they should turn, with safety and reasonable assurance of benefit.

Canucks First to Enter Berlin Quite Possible.

"Will our men get a chance?" This is the insistent question asked whenever Canadians foregathered in London.
The answer which the Daily Telegraph makes to a similar question of Kitchener's new army also applies to Canadians. It says:
"The French are fighting nobly in defence of their soil, but the power of their armies to assume a serious offensive movement grows less day by day. It must be the British who will lead the Allies into German soil to reap the utmost fruits of victory."
"Men who are now training many miles away from the fighting line are certain to find themselves in the van next year."
"No man need fear that the six months donkey work in the barracks square or at rifle range will be spent in vain. All that is required will get their chance."
"When the Germans are driven back to the Belgian frontier we will only be at the beginning of the struggle. As Earl Kitchener said from the first, we must be prepared for a long war."

Soldiers of the Queen.

Betwixt once did loyally decline
About the way we call the waves;
Ev'ry Briton's song was just the same
When singing of our soldier brave,
All the world had heard it, wonder'd why we sang,
And some have learn'd the reason why.
But we're forgetting it,
And we're letting it
Fade away and gradually die,
So when we say that England's master,
Remember who has made her so.
It's the Soldiers of the Queen, my lads,
Who've been, my lads, who've seen,
In the light for England's glory, lads,
When we have to show them what we mean.
And when we say we're always vain,
And when they ask us how it's done,
We'll proudly point to ev'ry one
Of England's Soldiers of the Queen.
War clouds gather over ev'ry land,
Our flag is threaten'd East and West,
Nations that we've shaken by the head,
Our bold resources try to test,
They thought they found us sleeping,
Thought us unprepared,
Because we have our party wavy;
But Englishmen unite,
When they're call'd to fight,
The battle for Old England's common cause,
The battle for Old England's common cause,
So when we say that England's master,
Remember who has made her so.

CHINESE PROVERBS ABOUT WOMEN

Respect always a silent woman; great is the wisdom of the woman that holdeth her tongue.
A vain woman is to be feared, for she will sacrifice all her pride. Trust not, for she is first in her own eye.
A haughty woman stumbles, for she cannot see what is before her feet.
A woman that is not trustworthy is a kite from which the string has been taken; she drives with every wind, and cometh to naught by a long fall.
A woman and a child are alike; each needs a strong upholding hand.
A woman that respects herself is more beautiful than a single star; more beautiful than many stars at night.
A woman who mistakes her place can never return to where she first was; the path has been covered up from her eyes.
A woman desirous of being seen is not trustworthy; fear the glance from her eyes.
Give heed to her to whom children have come; she walks in the east of ways, and lacks not love.
When first a woman loves she fears she fears not that which she has become a living and a single star.
A mother not spoken well of by her children is an enemy of the State.
A woman who does not live within the kingdom's walls.
Give heed to the voice of an old woman; sorrow has given her wisdom, and she knows not her own charms; therefore is she beautiful more so than the colors of the sea.
Speak not of a young man; if a woman be not righteous, what she speaks for itself.
Like sheep that are leaderless are women who come together for much talk.

Humane Foes in War.

One of the first acts of humanity recorded from the battlefields is the following related by a wounded soldier in Liverpool:
The wife of a colonel was making the round of a Liverpool hospital and stopped at the bedside of a wounded Highlander—a very bad case. The gallant fellow, one of whose legs had been recently amputated, was toying with a German helmet, evidently a trophy of war.
"Well," said the visitor, "I suppose you killed your man?"
"Well, now," modestly replied the soldier, "you see it 'ere, like this. He lay on the field pretty near me with an awful bad wound. I was losin' a lot o' blood 'ere 'is leg o' mine but I managed to crawl up to him an' bound him up as best I could. He did the same for me."
"A 'is, of course, 'is 'awthin' at a' said between us, for I knew new German an' 'is other man not a word o' English. When he'd done, an' seen 'is 'oo else 'at thank him, I just smiled, an' 'is way o' 'oken handed him my 'Glorious' 'at 'e smiled back an' gave me 'is helmet."

"To begin with, what is your age, madam?" was the lawyer's question. "My own," she answered, promptly. "I understand that, madam; I mean, how old are you?" "I am not old, sir," with indignation, "I beg your pardon, madam, means how many years have you passed?" "None; the years have passed me. How many of them have passed you?" "All I never heard of them stopping."
"I am, you must answer my question. I want to know your age," "I don't know that the acquaintance is desired by the other side."
"I don't see why you must upon refusing to answer my question," said the lawyer, cordially. "I am sure I will see how long you will last."

At the Head of the Class.

Some years ago in a poor schoolhouse in a back district, a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word which had passed down the entire class.
"Go up to the head," said the master and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."
The boy hung his head. But the next day he did not miss a word in spelling. The brighter scholars knew every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a change to get ahead, but there was not a single one. Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent scholar before, but now he knew every word.
"Dave, how do you get your lessons so well now?" said the master. "I learn every word in the lesson, and get my mother to hear me at night; then I go over them in the morning before I come to school. And I go over them at my desk before the class is called up."
"Good boy, Dave," said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way and you'll do."
Dave is today the manager of a big lumber company, and he distributes his start to the world. "Go up to the head," and see that you stay there; you can if you work hard."
