

They reached a place where cedar rails
Were laid along between.
To mount a fence has never been
An easy thing to do,

When those who climb convey a load,
That must be rising, too.
But, nothing daunted by the sight,
She, step by step, arose ;
At times employing elbow joints,
As well as all her toes.