

Weep, willow, weep o'er the stream that wanders,
Yet never retraces its course;
Weep, willow, weep for the twilight of lovers
And all that are racked in a world run astray . . .