

	PAGE
"That's him! That's the wolf in sheep's clothing!'" . . .	107
"He stumbled, and the bowl fell in a hundred pieces on the floor."	113
"Pierrette gave a great cry. 'O, sir,' he said, falling upon his knees, 'I'll really take them this time.'" . . .	119
"Mildred stood with her adopted mother, awaiting an arrival which was of interest to both."	125
"Mrs. Pilkington permitted her trusted Lucy to hear every word of her interview with Farmer Keronac." . . .	129
"'I was an orphan,' he said, simply. 'I never knew my parents. Madame Keronac got me at the asylum.'" . . .	131
"Without a word Mrs. Pilkington counted into her hand some shining coins, over which the crone fairly gloated." . .	139
"'The swell's in there—the fine gentleman!' he chuckled." . .	142
"Then she stepped to the door, at which she began to beat loudly."	147
"Wills stood, prepared to sign, and Mrs. Pilkington lingered at the door."	152
"He tossed a gold piece to the lackey."	157
"'Hoity-toity, my little man!' said the showman. 'You are an unnatural son.'"	159
"'She goes, Monsieur l'Abbé, as her wont is—not too fast, not too slow.'"	165
"He was watching the elephant seize Mademoiselle Viola round the waist as she descended from a pillar."	171
"Only the courage of her high breeding had enabled her to pre-side over that brilliant assembly."	183
"'I pray you, do not terrify the child,' said Mrs. Pilkington." . .	185
"'It will not be for long, dear. The lawyer has given me great hopes.'"	191
"There is another who offers evidence to obtain pardon for her-self."	199
"The prostrate figure of the boy lying upon the floor, with the mighty foot of the elephant on his chest."	207
"Mother and son together visited the galleries."	211