PEACE. At last the civilized world, after ages of sore trial, realizes that our greatest of all blessings is world peace. Natious do not live only on what they themselves produce. Britain is already compelled to import her food supply. Stop that and she starves; hence ber gigantic naval-forces. Other nations as they increase in population will be compelled to do likewise. Many already import a large portion of their food supplies. Nations feed each other Our duty is to prepare for this high destiny, and the path is obvious, since the increased exchange of food products is inevitable. I submit that the only. Pleasure required today for the maintenance of world peace is an agreement among three or four of the leading civilized powers (and as many more as desire to join-the more the bettern pledged to co-operate against disturbers of world peace should such arise, which would scarcely be possible to the face of the partnership agreement suggested. Man was created to ascend and by a law of his being must march upward and onward toward perfection. 'Be of good cheer, soldiers of peace. All goes well. In this the hollest of all crusades there can be no such word as fail.-Andrew Carnegie.

VERSE BY THE NEW LAU-REATE.

I have loved the flowers that Within whose magic tents Rich bues have marriage made With sweet unmemoried scents. A honeymoon delight— A joy of love at sight, That ages in an hour-My song be like a flower!

I have lov a airs that die Before their charm is writ-Upon a liquid sky Trembling to welcome it. Notes that, with pulses of fire, Proclaim the spirit's desire, Then die and are nowbere-My song be like an air!

Die, song, die like a breath And wither like a bloom Fear not a flowery death; Dread not an airy tomb! Fly with delight, fly hence! "Twas thine love's tender sense To feast; not on thy bier Beauty shall shed a tear. -Robert Bridges.

SOLITUDE. In the dark night, Thine eyes: In the still room, Thy voice: Thy presence and thy touch.

But when the daylight comes It is the world surrounds me. Then-I am alone. -Author Unknown. FOR SALE
