Promptly on time the jury came down, and much to the surprise of most of those who had heard the judge's direction, a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy, was returned by the foreman.

Nearly everyone expected a verdict directly the opposite to this, or, at the worst for the prisoner, a decision that he was guilty of manslaughter.

What St. Cyr himself thought could not be told from bis actions or looks, as the only indication of feeling on his part was the constant clasping and uncould not be taken as indicative of anything more than natural nervousness.

Now, Be Still.

There have been many complaints against the railroad company for not having opened the line for traffic more promptly after the recent storm. These people do not stop to consider that the 3 a. m. railroad company is far more anxious than anybody else to keep the road open, for they have been to five times the expense during the cessation of traffic than would have been the case had the line been kept open throughout clasping of his hands, but as this had the past 12 days. Everything that been his habit throughout the trial it could be done has been done by the officials and employes of the company and that, too, in the face of one of the severest storms ever experienced in the history of the company. Nearly all the employes on the snowbound train and rotary plows have been working night ous, to hear the sentence of Justice and day since January 10, and the fact that they will be paid 30 days' pay for one meaning to the prisoner at the bar, 12 days' blockade does not in any measure compensate them for the hardships they have endured. Those who, anything to say why the sentence of in former days complained because there was no railroad, are now among the strongest kickers because the railway company is unable to perform that of nearly a minute's duration, during which is impossible.
