PRINCIPLES VS. PARTIES.

The Globe finds it necessary to say something in explanation and defence of its claim to independence within party lines. "From The Globe's standpoint," it says, "the fundamental doctrines of Liberalism are to be preferred for Canada over the fundamental doctrines of Toryism; and, even though in our judgment the Liberals in Parliament have erred—errand in yielding to the clamor of the militarists, in not standing more firmly for the constitutional rights of the provinces, and in pensioning disgraced and discredited politicians—yet their error is in no instance one that a Tory Opposition would check or a Tory Government correct. From our point of view, therefore, it is better, and more in the public interest, to seek to recall the Liberal Administration from errors that are a surrender to Toryism, rather than to play into the hands of those who would run the whole round of the Tory policy."

This is plausible enough; but it does not, the Woodstock Express points out, meet the objection raised to The Globe's course.

From The Globe's standpoint the fundamental doctrines of Liberalism may be preferred over the fundamental doctrines of Toryism, and no one could properly find any fault with such preference; but from The Globe's conduct it would appear that the success of the Liberal party, as a party, is to be preferred over even the fundamental doctrines of Liberalism. If The Globe were true to the standard which it sets up for itself it would stand by the fundamental doctrines of Liberalism, no matter by whom enunciated; but that is just what The Globe refuses to do. When the test comes between political parties, The Globe loses sight of fundamental principles, and asks everything on party success.

Time and again in recent years the fundamental doctrines of Liberalism have been advocated by the leaders of the party calling itself Conservative; but in no single instance of this nature has The Globe shown its preference for Liberal principles.

The effect of this failure or The Globe to yield to its own logic is to cast doubt on its sincerity. Its faith in the fundamental principles of Liberalism is not proven by its works. And so it fails to bring conviction either to the public or to the party.

In the matter of independence, The Globe to-day, while in advance of some, perhaps most, of the party papers, is still far behind its founder. George Brown, when he saw Liberal principles in danger of being sacrificed by Liberal politicians, was not afraid to apply his own logic to the situation, even to the extent of bringing about the defeat of those whom he believed to have been unfaithful. A term in opposition was more likely, he believed, to bring the party back to its senses and its principles than perpetuation of power. The Globe to-day, in many respects a great paper, and a vast improvement on The Globe of George Brown's day, appears to lack the courage and consistency that characterized the earlier days. It contents itself with fine talk about fundamental principles, but it fails to bring the conviction that it is deeply in earnest, for in the end its conduct shows that, it is more interested in the success of the principles.

EPISCOPAL WIT.

Ottawa Citizen.

The Kincardine, Ont., Review, relates the following story, scarcely veiling the identity of a well-known Anglican divine who pays occasional visits to the capital and whose sermons are always enjoyed: "Rev. Charles Miles told a good story on the 12th of a Canadian bishop who has a son living in Chicago. On July 4 the son wrote to say: 'I am celebrating the day we licked you. The father in reply wrote: 'If I celebrated every day I licked you I would be celebrating half the time.'"

SIR WILFRID.

Toronto Mail.

A western politician, discussing the Premier Haultain, says of Sir Wilfrid: "I know him as if I had made him, and, thank heaven, I didn't. He has the fame of a statesman, the intellect of a dancing master, and the soul of a Quebec notary." A strange thing in connection with this description of Sir Wilfrid is the fact that the "dancing master" idea originated with Sir Richard Cartwright. Sir Richard once said he would make a first-class dancing master for a ladies' seminary!

BLUSHES WHEN

RAIN FALLS

Among the many wonders of the vast Florida swamps there is nothing more surprising than the blushing tree. This tree is not common. It is only found in the densest thickets of those interminable marshes, whose luxuriant vegetation is a revelation to explorers. It actually blushes when the rain falls upon it. The phenomenon at first seems incomprehensible. It never fails to astonish those who see it for the first time. The mysterious and beautiful glow of color which it assumes in a rainstorm baffles description. The Seminole Indians, who once ruled Florida, have always known of the tree, and have in their musical language words signifying the maiden tree, which reddens at the coming of her lover, the rain.

When the cool rain drenches a tree, a changing of color is noted. Gradually, yet unmistakably, the green hue gives way to pink. In a few minutes the green fades from sight. Only in a few half-hidden spots beneath broad branches and on its trunk is there a tinge of green to be seen. The tree is as pink as the cheek of a healthy girl.

After an hour or more, when the shower passes over, the wonderful tree assumes its familiar green once more. As it is changing back to emerald the spectator suddenly realizes the secret of the phenomenon. Certain tiny insects are about the tree itself change color. These peculiar parasites are possessed of the power of chameleons. In the bright, warm sunshine they are greener than the tree on which they live. But when the chilly rain falls upon them they contract their tiny backs and become a pretty pink in color. Millions of these change the tint of the tree and impart to it a blushing aspect.

A GOOD DOG

DETECTIVE

Scrip, who lives in Old Town, when at home, is an undersized cur with bright eyes and sharp ears, and is of badly mixed lineage. He is owned by one of the state game wardens, whose duty it is to examine certain trains coming down from the game region. Every piece of game must be checked up and suspicious packages examined. The Main law positively prohibits the taking out of the state of game birds in any way whatever.

As the people alight from the train, few notice a little dog dodging about among them, sniffing at this handbag and that bundle.

Soon his master hears a little bark. He knows what that means, and, dropping everything, finds Scrip dodging and nosing about the heels of a passenger. The warden closes in on the game "pointed" by Scrip, quietly invites the suspect into the baggage room, and questions him about the game which he has concealed about his person or effects. The dog has never been known to fail in "pointing" game. He possibly may miss game, but when he has made up his dogish mind that there is a violation of the law, he has always been correct so far.

But inspecting the handbaggage is not all of the little detective's work by any means. After the passengers are all out he hops into the baggage and express car and applies his sharp little nose to everything in sight.

While making his usual inspection the express car one day he came across a barrel to all intents and purposes containing fish. It certainly had fish in it. Scrip sniffed at it, went on and then came back and sniffed again. Round and round the barrel he went, whining and dancing. With a faith in the little animal born of long experience, the officer investigated the barrel, and, found, in the centre of a liberal lining of fresh shore cod, several dozen of plump partridges.

The most enthusiastic fisherman has to draw the line somewhere.

"I had stricture for eleven years. It finally brought on Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I had an uncomfortable, shooting pain in the groin and feeling as though something was in the urethra. My back was weak and I could scarcely stoop over. Urine was full of sediment. Had a desire to urinate frequently. Family doctors, so-called specialists, patent medicines, electric belts, all failed. I was discouraged. I had spent hundreds of dollars in vain. Finally I consulted Dr. Kennedy & Kergan as the last resort. I had heard a great deal about them and concluded from the fact that they had been established over 25 years that they understood their business. I am delighted with the result. In one week I felt better and in a few weeks was entirely cured. Have gained sixteen pounds in weight."
