"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as the leaves of trees are gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expels them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

WOMEN'S COLUMN.

The English Market. Below is a continued extract from the able speech made by Prof. Robertson in Ontario, and the British Market. Part of the address was given last week.

BUTTER. The value of the butter imported into Great Britain in 1891 was $56,410,414. Of that quantity Denmark furnished $23,680,421, at the average price of 24 cents per pound. France supplied $14,782,293 at an average price of 23.6 cents per pound while Canada sent only $912,307 at an average price of 18.2 cents per pound. There is an easy possibility for a very large extension of our exports of butter. The freight charges are not barriers. The rates last week from Woodstock, Ont., to Liverpool were 55 cents per 100 pounds. A shipment of 200 packages of fresh-made creamery butter has just been made from the Dominion experimental dairy stations at the English market. It is expected to realize 35 cents per pound, the price of the finest Danish butter. The English price of fresh made butter is always high during the winter. A responsible firm of exporters of dairy products has offered to provide quantities of the finest Danish butter to 25 cheese factories into creamery for the manufacture of butter during the winter. By the use of a centrifugal cream separator a creamery from 16 to 30 per cent more butter can be obtained from the same milk than when it is handled in the ordinary way at the farms. A higher price will always be obtained for quality that is uniform. The winter creameries will enable us to ship $1,000,000 of fresh made creamery butter to England annually during the winter within three years and these 200 packages of experimental stations are the first which have ever been sent.

CEASE. Of eggs Great Britain imported in the year ending December, 1891, to the value of $23,434,829. It may be interesting to note the trend of this business. Great Britain imported in 1890 from Canada $5,910,433 and from United States, $16,384,248, while in 1891 she imported from Canada $9,692,448, and from the United States, $8,560,817. One reason for our great gain in this market is that we have improved the quality and made it nearly uniformly fine. A like success in other lines of our exports will follow from similar care here in providing the very best quality. A quantity of finest Canadian cheese is still sold at high prices retail, under the name of finest English Cheddar. We are making an effort by branding our cheese "Finest Canadian" to gain for our farmer the higher price, which presently finds a stopping place in the pocket of a crafty English shopkeeper.

EGGS. Of eggs Great Britain imported in 1891 to the number of 106,811,730 dozen. Canada and Great Britain in the year ended July 31, 1891, were sending only a few, but in 1891 she sent 2,760,757 dozen. There is the prospect for a large and remunerative trade with England, where experience has enabled shippers to avoid losses from breakages, and has induced the steamship companies to provide refrigerator space at low rates. A communication from Liverpool was read, giving particulars of the English trade in eggs from the continent of Europe, and also directions for the best method of packing eggs before being shipped from Canada.

CAPITULATION. The total value of animal products, of the kind which have been enumerated in the foregoing, which were imported into Great Britain in 1881 was $240,864,671. The total value of the exports of these same products from Canada to Great Britain in the year ending June 30, 1891, was $19,684,238, and from Canada to Great Britain, $1,935,441. If all our food products from animal sources were sent to Great Britain they would form only 9 per cent of her total purchases of the same commodities. A 1 that points to the possibility of sending food products from Canadian farms to the English market at a profit.

—A florist says that the law governing the coloring of flowers makes a blue rose impossible. According to this law, the three colors, red, blue and yellow, never all appear in the same species of flowers; any two may exist, but never the three. Thus we have the red and yellow roses, but no blue; red and blue verbenas, but no yellow; yellow and blue in the various members of the viola family (as pansies, for instance), but no red; red and yellow gladioli, but no blue, and so on.

A CRYING ENIGMA - Every crying child should be promptly removed. Sick headache is a crying affliction of thousands of Canadians, which can easily be removed by the use of Bunkley's Blood Bitters, the best known stomach, liver and bowel regulator and cure sick headache from whatever cause arising.

Conducted by the Ladies of the Sackville W. C. T. U. To day we give the readers of the Women's Column, a New Year's memory of more than fifty years ago, from the pen of Mother Thompson, one of the pioneer W. C. T. U. crusaders. The comparisons of former days with the present serve to encourage all friends of the temperance reform and to strengthen the faith of honest workers. If so much has been accomplished in the past what may we not hopefully anticipate in the spread of temperance sentiment in the days that are to come?

A New Years Day Long Ago. (By Elizabeth J. Thompson.) How slow, and yet how sure, are the developments of God's eternal purposes. So I thought, as I read in the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette an account from "Washington Special," of the hospitality of the national capital on January 1, 1892, with this closing sentence: "Not so many years gone by, the bowl of eggnog was seldom if ever, omitted from the list of refreshments in every home upon hospitality bent. Yet to-day one is rarely tempted to indulge. Potatoes of all kinds have been superstitious in both official and private houses by the advent of bonbons and coffee or chocolate, as fancy may dictate or fashion ordain.

Vividly there came before me a scene of the past. In Cincinnati, Ohio, fifty-three years ago, on Fourth St., near the old Longworth home, whose friendship and flowers yielded a most gracious and inspiring influence to the novelty of our new millennium, the "new" time came near for the much honored observation of keeping open house on New Year's Day. At that date (1859) of the Christian era, the wine cup and eggnog bowl of liberal profron formed an essential and most attractive part of the entertainment.

I mused on these things quietly in my own heart, and have decided to be true to my own convictions, even at the risk of being "alone in a good cause." I then novel entertainment of bolice and chocolate.

First I invited Mrs. Alexander, a bright, lovable young widow to receive with me. Mrs. A. was a sister of Mrs. Lutz Anderson, Sr. and afterwards married Judge Hall, of Cincinnati. She was not a pronounced temperance woman, indeed few were at that date, but she was a sensible, good woman, and as she expressed it, "deplored the fashion of requiring of our gentleman friends the civility of so many drinks the first day of the new year." Hence my dear little bridesmaid, for such she had been, entered into my plans most cheerfully, much to my delight, and soon our party was complete to find that there was to be no opposition from the young Kentucky husband, who generously sealed his approval by presenting me with a superb sized silver coffee urn, as a New Year's gift, which, with its pioneer history, is a favorite heirloom in our family.

From the dear old paternal home in the Highlands, sixty miles away, also came loving tokens of approval, and it did not seem, as that New Year's morning dawned brightly upon us, that all things were "working together for good."

Many were the calls recorded on that day of new experiences, and our hearts were greatly cheered as friend after friend, departing left with their blessing for the hot coffee, chocolate, etc.

About dusk we were surprised by a call from Cincinnati's distinguished citizen Judge Burnet, accompanied by a group of young men - about eight in all - and none of them seemed more than 21 years of age. These favored youths, it appeared, were the pets of Judge Burnet, and entrusted to his care by their mother, who was his special society friend. When the pallid old judge entered the room, leaving his charge in care of Mrs. Alexander, he approached the table where I was standing near the coffee urn, and taking my hand in both of his he said: "I commend you heartily, my dear young friend, for thus bravely standing by the principles of your noble father," and casting his eyes towards the hot coffee and chocolate said, "This is just what I need to get my boys in condition to meet their dear mothers; and who is to blame?" Then, offering his arm, he said, "But let me introduce you to them;" he then graciously presented me to each one in the circle, for Mrs. Alexander knew them and their mothers well, had seated them, as she playfully remarked to Judge Burnet, "ready for a Highland coasting campaign," for my dear mother had sent me country hams, turkey, butter and even cream, for the occasion, and delicious cake in beautiful variety, made by "Aunt Parsey," the favorite cook of my childhood, who loved me only less than my mother.

Hot coffee and chocolate had been faithfully served all day, and a fresh supply for the evening visitors was just brought in as our honored guest and his young friends arrived. They enjoyed it and so did we, and now, after more than half a century, can you wonder that I rejoice in the report from our Washington correspondent? - Hillsboro, Ohio.
