Lord Lansdowne Offers Remedy

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, Two of the Opposing Leaders.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Two of the Opposing Leaders.

Full Text of Resolution to be Submitted to Lords Tomorrow—Polling Begins December 3.

London, Nov. 21.—The Lords have presented their case to the country in the coming electoral struggle, a case which John E. Redmond, leader of the Nationalists in a speech at Islington tonight characterized as "unapologetically committing suicide as fast as possible."

The resolution which Lord Lansdowne gave notice he would introduce on Wednesday, represents the attitude taken by the Unionist side in the veto conference and the rock on which the conference foundered. These resolutions are as follows:

It is desirable that provision be made for settling differences that may arise between the House of Commons and this House as reconstituted, reduced in numbers in accordance with the recent resolutions of this House. That as to bills, other than money bills, such provisions should be made on the following lines:

If a difference arises between the Houses in regard to any bill other than a money bill, such provisions should be made during any interval of less than one year, and such differences are unable to be adjusted by other means, it shall be settled at a joint sitting composed of the members of the two Houses, provided that if the measure relates to a matter of great gravity, and has not been adequately submitted to the judgment of the people it shall not be referred to a joint sitting but submitted for decision to the electors of a referendum.

That as to money bills, the provision should be on the following lines: The Lords are prepared to forego their constitutional right to reject and amend money bills which are of a purely financial character, provided that the House of Commons shall have a casting vote only. If the committee holds that the bill or the provisions thereof are of a purely financial character, that question shall be referred to a joint committee of both Houses with the Speaker of the House of Commons as chairman and who shall have a casting vote only. If the committee holds that the bill or the provisions in question are not of a financial character, they shall be dealt with forthwith at a joint sitting of the Houses.

The Liberals contend that the adoption of these resolutions would render future Liberal governments as powerless as ever against the House of Lords. The present situation appears

More like an Oriental headdress than a staid and conventional hat is the delightfully quaint little opera bonnet which is worn this season with rich evening coats.

This little bonnet takes the place of the scarf which many women twisted over their hair for a short journey through the streets or in a public conveyance or taxicab to theatre or opera last winter.

The bonnet is, of course, fother tight, and is usually soft and crushable and easy to take care of when one's wraps are removed. This headpiece is of gold lace with a border of gold foliage, and the sweeping aigrette is in the fashionable yellow.

THE BUSHRANGER'S FINISH

Continued.

"Why did she follow them?" asked Ah Soo.

"Don't know; maybe she's sweet on one of 'em. It's more than likely," said Jan.

"What are we going to do about them?"

"Follow them up the ranges; we may get a chance there," said Jan.

"Is it worth it?"

"He'll have money with him."

"Who?"

"Villiers, he's sure to take some up to Bunda. There's the horse. One of them, the dark bay, won the Cap. I'd like to have him," said Jan.

"Horses will be your ruin," said Ah Soo.

"What's the good of a racer to you?"

"Never you mind. I fancy The Nugget, and I'll get him if I can. A fast horse like that often saves a man's neck in a tight place," said Jan.

"Will the girl give information about us, tell where we are?" asked Ah Soo.

"She may; probably she will."

"Then we'd best make tracks."

"I think we'll get ahead of them, not follow them," said Jan.

"Why?"

"Because if the girl blabs they're sure to follow up the track, they'll never suspect we've doubled round. I know this country all the way to Bunda. We'll wait until they get there, then we'll see what's best to be done," said Jan.

"You were a fool to let the girl slip you," said Ah Soo, nursing his wounded wrist.

"Perhaps I was. It can't be helped now, so come along," answered Jan Wasseil.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Chinaman.

When Alma arrived home she told her father of her encounter with the bushrangers. He knew at once it must be Jan Wasseil and Ah Soo, and wished Sergeant Dunning was in Brisbane.

"He's off the scent again," he said.

"You had a lucky escape, my girl. We must be careful, it is not safe for you to ride alone." He shuddered at what might have befallen her had she fallen into Ah Soo's clutches.

Alma said nothing about Robin Goldler's declaration of love, and her answer. She was anxious for his safety, told her father she feared the bushrangers would follow them, perhaps take them unawares.

Father Morrissey's No. 7 Cured His Rheumatism in 3 Weeks.

Father Morrissey's prescription, called "No. 7," cures Rheumatism completely as well as quickly, as Mr. James Major, of Harland, N.B., gladly testifies.

"I want to tell you," he writes, "of the wonderful cure Father Morrissey's medicine made of me. I was troubled with Rheumatism so badly that I could not get into my wagon alone. After using his medicine for three weeks I was completely cured, and felt like a boy."

"I am now a man of 70 years of age, and in good health yet—no Father Morrissey's medicine I owe all thanks."

"I can truly advise anyone suffering from Rheumatism to use this medicine at once."

Father Morrissey's No. 7 Tablets act directly on the kidneys, invigorating them so that they can thoroughly cleanse the blood of the Uric Acid which causes the Rheumatism, and thus permanently cure.

"No, I shall never tire of station life, but it will be necessary to go to Goldler's before long to look after our interests."

"Frank Lewis will soon let us know if there is anything wrong, he's in close touch with the place and knows everything that is going on."

"I know that; but Lewis is not on the spot, and many things may be kept from him. They are a rough lot at the camp," said Robin.

"We can't both leave here," said Howard.

"Perhaps you had better go down; one of the men and Boran can go with you."

"Can't you come, too?"

"No. There are the horses to look after. I expect they shall not get sufficient work when you are away."

"You'll manage to keep them going."

"When I return it will be time to start for Sydney, or if I cannot get back you can travel with them and I'll meet you there."

"You must go with us. You are accustomed to travelling long distances," said Howard.

It was decided that Robin should leave for Brisbane and Goldler's, and he selected a man named Ben Caunt to accompany him. Boran of course was to go.

Nothing had been seen of Jan Wasseil and Ah Soo, although they were concealed not far away.

Sergeant Dunning was scouring the country; the clever black tracker he had with him had more than once struck the trail and lost it again. Troopers Dent and Rolfer were also with him.

Dunning had received special permission to hunt "The Tiger" and Ah Soo down, and the work suited him. The treacherous cold-blooded murderer of his mates on the coast had infuriated Dunning against them; he vowed to take them dead or alive—alive if possible.

"The Tiger" was clever and cunning. He knew Dunning was chasing

A married man says the shortest season of the year is the time between fall millinery openings and Christmas.

If a man is honest with himself he can be depended upon to give his neighbors a square deal.
