The Valley's Owner.
First as a sportsman and then as a statesman, Lord Dufferin has shown himself a great deal more than the mere holder of a title. Vyndham Thomas Vyndham-Kilgust, Earl of Dufferin and Apsley, Viscount of Atholl, Baron of Dufferin and Barron—these are his titles. Then he is a knight of St. Patrick and an ex-Life Guards man. He was born in 1841. Of course, he went through the University, taking his degrees from Christ Church, Oxford. Then he went straight into the army. But the Life Guards, who make such a brave show as escorts to Queen Victoria or the Princess of Wales on any occasion, very seldom do any serious soldiering work. So the youthful Lord Dufferin—who was called Lord Atholl at the time—was sent to the 10th Hussars, his father having still alive—indeed, not a moment's danger in another capacity. The Athollian was sent to the Crimea when he was just twenty-five years old.

He resigned his commission and took service in the army with the 10th Hussars. As a newspaper man young Atholl travelled all through the adventurous campaign of Magdala. He represented the Daily Telegraph in the Crimea, and his reports were bright and graphic. It was his first literary work, but he has become a tolerably voluminous author since. On the "journey through the Crimea" he has written a book which is now being reprinted. It was his first literary work, but he has become a tolerably voluminous author since. On the "journey through the Crimea" he has written a book which is now being reprinted. It was his first literary work, but he has become a tolerably voluminous author since.
