How the Other Half Lives.

By RUTH CAMERON.

When Jacob the one half of a world didn't know how the other half lived I think he spoke a bigger truth than he knew.

For there are in a ny other classes of people who know as little each, how the other lives, as do the rich and poor.

Once upon a time a woman whose life had been spent gaining a perpetual sacrifice of energy and time, and intellectual interests, and friendship with her husband and children and health and nervous energy before the altar of the house immaculate and the routine all important, put rather too large a quantity of the last two ingredients into the sacrificial fire, and as a consequence had a nervous breakdown, and was ordered by the doctor to give up housekeeping for at least a year.

Being a family physician, the doctor took the liberty of suggesting that a friend of his, who had a large home in a pleasant suburb, would be willing to lodge this woman and her family. I have since felt sure that this wise doctor was giving a prescription in that advice, and was thinking of Jacob. Ris' philosophy, even if he didn't know it himself.

For the doctor's friend was "the other half of the world" to this woman. She was one of those wives to whom housekeeping is not the whole business of life. She kept her home reasonably clean and she always served wholesome meals to her children, but she possessed her possessions instead of being possessed by them, and she fitted the routine to her life instead of her life to the routine. She was very fond of music and sometimes after breakfast she would play Beethoven's Second Symphony before doing the dishes. Her husband was a newspaper man, and she kept in touch with the news even if she didn't read the paper every day. On Saturday morning, when her oldest boy was to be in an important football game, she left the cooking until afternoon that she might witness that game.

Of course she sometimes erred on the side of neglecting her housework for things that she liked better, but surely no more than the first woman erred on the side of neglecting other important things because she liked housework better.

It was such a tremendous experience for the visitor. She had vaguely known that such women existed, but she had never come into such close contact with the "other half." At first, of course, she was horrified; then she saw how much happiness the "other half" got out of life, and she actually began to wonder; and the wonder grew so strong and went so deep that it really changed her outlook of life, and she went back to her home a wiser as well as a healthier woman.

What a lot of us there are who would be benefited by finding out how the other half lives.

Ruth Cameron

Opening of the Great Liverpool Dock.

The opening of the New Gladstone Dock at Seaforth by the King and Queen recently marks the successful completion of the first stage of a scheme of dock extension at Liverpool which has been under consideration since 1906, although the actual work of constructing the dock was not taken in hand until September, 1910. The necessity for increasing the area and depth of the dock accommodation at Liverpool has been forced upon the Mersey docks and harbor board by the rapid and continuous growth in the length and tonnage of Atlantic liners. How rapid has been the growth in recent years may be judged from the following figures: In 1893 the Campania was launched, and for a period of six years was the largest and quickest boat on the Liverpool-New York service, her length being 622 feet, her speed 22 knots per hour, and her registered tonnage 12,500. In 1899 the Oceanic (17,000) was launched, and at once took the Campania of her premier position; and then in quick succession came the Celtic (21,000 tons) the Baltic (24,000 tons), the Lusitania (32,000 tons), the Olympic (45,000 tons), and, finally, the Imperator (50,000 tons), which has just been completed and put into service by the Hamburg-America Company. Even the Campania would look small if brought alongside the Imperator or either of the other 50,000 ton boats now in the builders' hands.

The original scheme of the Mersey docks and harbor board provided for the construction of a new half-tide dock, and of two loading and berthing docks, on the unused but enclosed land at the north or Seaforth end of the dock estate. The water area of these new docks when completed will be 40 acres, and there will be berthing accommodation for loading and unloading four 1,000 feet boats at one and the same time. The docks were to be named the Gladstone docks, in recognition of the great services to the port and com-

Back Was Lame For Two Years

Stomach Troubles and Weakness of Kidneys Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

There is an enormous amount of suffering from liver and kidney derangements and stomach troubles that could easily be avoided by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If you could only realize the scores of everyday ills that arise from a sluggish condition of the kidneys, liver and bowels you would not be long in giving this medicine a trial.

Mrs. Edward Stewart, New Richmond West, Que., writes: "I want to tell you how thankful I am for using your Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for stomach troubles and backache caused by weak kidneys. I was unable to wash my clothes for over two years on account of my back being lame. I read the Almanac and began using these pills. Two boxes made a complete cure. I can do my own washing and other work now, and want to say to lady friends that they do not know how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

have been unmanageable and unsafe for closing a dock entrance 120 feet wide, or for holding up 7,000,000 cubic feet (200,000 tons) of water, apart altogether from the difficulty of providing space for them in the funnel-shaped entrance channel. The caisson form of closing was, therefore, the only one practicable under the circumstances. The caisson is constructed of steel girders and plates on the plan of a pontoon, its dimensions being 120 feet in length by 50 feet in height, by 25 feet in width, and its weight is 1,200 tons. Since it is almost balanced in the water by the enclosed air, the power required to move it in and out of the caisson-chamber on the right hand side of the dock will be chiefly used in overcoming the resistance of the water. Two 750 horse power electrically driven motors are provided for this purpose, and the power will be transmitted to the caisson by wire cables working in sheaves attached to the opposite wall of the dock entrance.

Since it will be necessary to empty the dock entirely in 2½ hours, the pumping plant is of considerable size and capacity, and comprises five units of 1000 h.p. each. The pumps are of the centrifugal type and have discharge pipes 54 inches in diameter. Each pump is to be direct driven by a vertical four-cylinder two-cycle Diesel oil engine, running under normal conditions at 180 revolutions per minute. The engines are being built by Carols Freres of Ghent, and are the only portion of the dock plant which is of foreign make.

On the north side of the dock a single-storey shed 500 feet long and 100 feet wide has been erected, and four 30 cwt. cranes of the movable type have also been provided. On the south side of the dock two similar cranes, one of 40 tons and one of five tons load capacity, will be installed.

Eat Whatever You Relish.

Sometimes the digestive machinery gets away on. No kind of Food looks good to you. You need Stafford's Prescription "A."

It is a temporary artificial digestive process to do the work until the stomach recovers normal conditions. Many people think Pepsin is the thing to take. Four times out of five they are wrong. Pepsin will digest eggs, meat, etc., but has no effect on starchy foods like bread, potatoes, cake, pudding—in fact most of the eatables that cause the trouble.

Stafford's Prescription "A" is the thing.

It contains all the valuable ingredients for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis, and nervous Dyspepsia, etc.

Do what you like. Stafford's Prescription "A" will do the rest.
