

BUSINESS CARDS

FREDERICK BISCOE, Barrister and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, Conveyancer, &c. Guelph, Office, corner of Wyndham and Queen Streets.

STEPHEN BOULT, Architect, Contractor and Builder. Planning Mill, and every kind of Joiner's Work prepared for the trade and the public. His Factory is on Quebec Street, Guelph.

OLIVER, MACDONALD & OSLER, Barristers and Solicitors in Law, Solicitors, Notaries Public, &c. Office—Corner of Wyndham and Quebec Streets, up stairs, Guelph, Ont. (dw)

WILLIAM J. PATTERSON, Official Assignee for the County of Wellington. Office—Opposite Town Hall, Guelph. (dw)

THE HOTEL, GUELPH, remodelled and newly furnished. Good accommodation for commercial travellers. Free carriage to and from all trains. First-class Liquor in connection. (dw)

DR. KEATING & WORSFOLD, Physicians, Surgeons, &c. Office—the late Dr. Howitt's, Essex Street, Guelph.

CHARLES HATHERLY, Contractors, Well Sinkers and General Jobbers. Excavations of all kinds undertaken by day or job.

DR. BROOK, RESIDENCE Directly opposite Chalmers' Church, QUEBEC STREET. (d)

New Advertisements

BOY WANTED at Day's Bookstore. Apply at once. (d)

TO BLACKSMITHS and Machinists.—Wanted immediately at Guelph's Agricultural Works, a good blacksmith, and also a machinist. Nislin Crescent, Aug. 19, 1872. (d)

TWO GOOD HOUSES FOR SALE IN THE WEST WARD.—One stone house on Norfolk Street, 11 rooms. One rough-hewn cottage on Charles Street, 5 rooms. Both contain every convenience. Apply to James Davidson, proprietor, at Hart & Spens. (d)

COV LOST.—On the 12th inst., from Mitchell's Hill, a black cow, in good condition, every year, one horn, some spots of white on belly, and giving milk. Any one returning her or giving information as to her whereabouts, will be rewarded. Ed. PETER HUNTER, Carpenter. (d)

ROOMS.—A lady and gentleman, or two gentlemen, can be accommodated with private rooms, with or without board, where other boarders are kept, by applying to Mrs. Galt's, Mr. Rogg's new house, George Street. (d)

EDUCATIONAL. MRS. BUDD. Begg to announce that her school and music classes will be open on Monday, Aug. 20th, Guelph, Aug. 15th, 1872. (d)

AGRICULTURAL Insurance Company. Messrs. Jessop & Corbett having resigned the Agency of this Company, it has been transferred to WM. J. PATTERSON. Guelph, Aug. 15, 1872. (d)

NOTICE. To all whom it may concern. Notice is hereby given to heads of families, or others who have relatives interested in the ERIE CANAL, that inasmuch as the plot of ground has never been properly settled for, a MEETING of parties interested in the same, will be held at 4 P.M. ON FRIDAY, 30th AUGUST, inst., at 4 P.M., in order to make a final settlement, get the ground divided, and put to rights according to law. This notice is given to save future trouble and expense. DON. FEIGL, Surveyor. Killeen P.O., Aug. 15, 1872. (d)

REMOVED. Miss Craven. Begg to announce to the inhabitants of Guelph that she has removed to the corner of Quebec and Yarmouth streets, and is prepared to execute all orders in Dressmaking, Millinery, Straw and Felt Work. A complete stock of patterns constantly on hand. Cutting and Fitting done in the latest style. DYEING—Dresses restored to their original colour. Apprentices wanted immediately. Guelph, August 12, 1872. (d)

INSOLVENT ACT OF 1869. In the matter of Henry Thomas and Peter Duggan, as well individually as co-partners, doing business as Guelph, under the name, style, and firm of Thomas and Duggan, Insolvents.

EDUCATION. The Misses Rheinmies. School of Art, Music, and General Education, for Primary and Evening day or Boarding Pupils, will reopen after the usual vacation on Monday, the 2nd of September, 1872.

BARGAINS, BARGAINS! A large lot more of extraordinary CHEAPER THAN EVER AT P. C. ALLAN'S

- 1 doz. Crystal Stairs for... 1 75
1 doz. Ivory Handled Dinner Knives, worth $2.00... 1 00
1 doz. Ivory and Bone, worth $1.00... 50
Electro plated Spoons and Forks at less than half price.
Hair Brushes, worth $1 to $1.50 for 30c to 40c
Electro-plated Butter Knives... 40
$1.25 and $1.00... for half-price
India Rubber Brushes, 10c, 15c, 20c, 25c and 30c per pair.
Faber's pencils worth 10c... for 5c
One ream of Royal Foolscap for... 1 00
Four quills of Foolscap for... 50
Electro-plated Butter Knives, worth 50c for 20c
Real Oil Paintings, beautifully framed for $1, worth $1 to $3
Nearly a ton of the Best Ivory Soap to be sold cheaper than ever.

ONTARIO COAL YARDS. MURTON & REID. Have received and are receiving a large stock of Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R.R. Co's COAL of all sizes.

DEADY'S WELLINGTON HOTEL. The undersigned begs to intimate to his numerous friends and the travelling public generally that he has resumed the management of the above hotel, and trusts by courtesy and strict attention to business to make the Wellington one of the most popular hotels in town. The best wines and liquors kept at the bar. Superior Refreshing and attentive waiter always on hand. MARTIN DEADY. Guelph, April 19, 72.

Nomination for the South Riding of Wellington.

Mr. David Sturton Elected by Acclamation.

The nomination for the South Riding of Wellington took place on the Market Square, Guelph, on Wednesday, the 20th, at one o'clock. The proceedings were delayed a short time on account of the rain, but shortly after that hour, Mr. Sheriff Grange, the Returning Officer, appeared on the stand in the Market Square. Considering the season of the year, there was a very fair representation of the electors of the Riding, between 500 and 600 being present. The Returning Officer, after having read the writ and other documents, said he was prepared to receive nominations.

Mr. James Laidlaw, Reeve of Guelph Township, said he had great pleasure in nominating his old friend and member David Sturton, Esq., to the high and important position of member in the Dominion Parliament for this Riding. In doing so he hoped they would bear with him while he gave some reasons why he considered Mr. Sturton again worthy of their confidence. He had been for 15 or 16 years the representative of this Riding, and during that time he had been a faithful, upright and trustworthy public servant. (Cheers.) He never had been one thing on the hustings and another thing in Parliament, but was invariably a true friend to the Riding and to his country. In referring to Mr. Sturton, he said that he had seen his intention to go back to the time when he entered public life, but he would advert to one or two subjects which had come up since Confederation. He, like many others, believed that Confederation would prove a cure for all the evils they complained of. DON. FEIGL, Surveyor.

Mr. Sturton said that it had been arranged that he should speak last. He had great pleasure in introducing Mr. Patterson, the successor of Sir Francis Hincks. (Cheers.) Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.) He had the fullest confidence in beating Sir Francis Hincks, but he would find it a difficult matter to beat a man like Mr. Sturton, who had been tried and proved, and who stood before them to-day strong in his integrity and impregnable because of his honesty. He was proud to say that his views and Mr. Sturton's were in perfect accord, and he rejoiced to be here with the members of the Opposition, when, taunted by the Ministerialists that they had no power, might feel the reproach and almost give up in despair. But Mr. Sturton had never been ashamed to be ranked among those despised 55 men, the sole champions of the people's rights, and he would do his best to do them more honour to his colleagues who desired to desert their post, but stood firm and true rather than be ranked among the servile man who swelled the majorities of the Government. They fought for the rights of the people, for their vested rights to have the control of the public money. What was their experience during the past few years? They found the Government retreating and going back to the old system which was rampant when Hincks was the then champion of reform. The Government had sapped the very foundation of their rights and of the members of their party, and had sanctioned the outrage. This step by step they had gone from one iniquity to another unchecked save by the protests of an indignant and faithful Opposition in Parliament, and a no less indignant people throughout the Dominion. He spoke for some time further on the Pacific Railway, and the only way in which that great enterprise could be made valuable to the country, and promote immigration. In electing David Sturton to-day they were putting one spoke in the wheel, and doing what they could to bring the state of things about. He resigned in favour of Mr. Sturton, and retired amid great applause.

Mr. Edward Johnson, Deputy-Reeve of Erin, seconded the nomination of Mr. Sturton. He was 15 or 16 years the representative, and during his long and faithful service he has well earned the name, which is often applied to his friend Rymal, of Honest David Sturton. (Cheers.) He had never violated a pledge given, he had stood every test, and come out as a true and tried man and a sound and reliable Reformer. (Cheers.) This kind of man worthy of their confidence, and who could not be bought up by any jobs or railway contracts. They had seen many of their public men bought up by such jobs, as sheep in the market. He was glad to find that some of those unscrupulous hirings had been made null and void by the honest electors of Ontario. (Laughter.) Walsh had been to the right about, McDougall, the notorious turncoat, could only get 250 votes in his old Riding, and Hincks, who years ago was the champion of the Reform party, and had deserted it, was defeated by Mr. Patterson. (Cheers.) These men would do anything for power. Look how

They had cut up our own county to suit their purposes.

They had cut up our own county to suit their purposes. We had Erin and Ermosa voting for one man for the Local Legislature and another for the Dominion Parliament. (Hear, Hear.) This was all done in order to suit Mr. Drew, and secure a seat for him. But their friend Col. Higginbotham had beaten him on his own ground, and the Riding of Erin elected him they elected an honest man, who would be true to their interests, to his principles and his party. (Cheers.) How could they have a good Government or a pure Parliament, when they found such men in it as Col. Gray, who not only drew his pay as member, his mileage, but also $800 a month for doing next to nothing, and which, to evade the law, John A. Macdonald had to pay him by the month. These were some of the things they had to complain of, and against these Mr. Sturton had got his face, and for this, if for nothing else, he was again entitled to their support. (Cheers.) He was a man they had every reason to be proud of. He had kept his skirts clean. None of the public money had ever stuck to his fingers. (Hear, Hear.) Mr. Sturton had got his face, and for this, if for nothing else, he was again entitled to their support. (Cheers.) He was a man they had every reason to be proud of. He had kept his skirts clean. None of the public money had ever stuck to his fingers. (Hear, Hear.) Mr. Sturton had got his face, and for this, if for nothing else, he was again entitled to their support. (Cheers.)

Mr. Wm. Whitehead seconded the nomination. Mr. Melvin said they would all be glad to hear Mr. Charles Clarke, M. P., and therefore nominated that gentleman. Mr. John Holton seconded the nomination. Mr. J. P. McMillan came forward to nominate Col. Higginbotham, but the hour in which the nominations were to be made having elapsed, he could not do so. He, however, made some explanations with regard to his position, and that he had been mentioned by some as being a probable candidate. He had never said one word detrimental to Mr. Sturton, and would be the last man to do so. He was sorry that he had not been able to do so, but he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Sturton said that it had been arranged that he should speak last. He had great pleasure in introducing Mr. Patterson, the successor of Sir Francis Hincks. (Cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Sturton said that it had been arranged that he should speak last. He had great pleasure in introducing Mr. Patterson, the successor of Sir Francis Hincks. (Cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

They had cut up our own county to suit their purposes.

They had cut up our own county to suit their purposes. We had Erin and Ermosa voting for one man for the Local Legislature and another for the Dominion Parliament. (Hear, Hear.) This was all done in order to suit Mr. Drew, and secure a seat for him. But their friend Col. Higginbotham had beaten him on his own ground, and the Riding of Erin elected him they elected an honest man, who would be true to their interests, to his principles and his party. (Cheers.) How could they have a good Government or a pure Parliament, when they found such men in it as Col. Gray, who not only drew his pay as member, his mileage, but also $800 a month for doing next to nothing, and which, to evade the law, John A. Macdonald had to pay him by the month. These were some of the things they had to complain of, and against these Mr. Sturton had got his face, and for this, if for nothing else, he was again entitled to their support. (Cheers.)

Mr. Wm. Whitehead seconded the nomination. Mr. Melvin said they would all be glad to hear Mr. Charles Clarke, M. P., and therefore nominated that gentleman. Mr. John Holton seconded the nomination. Mr. J. P. McMillan came forward to nominate Col. Higginbotham, but the hour in which the nominations were to be made having elapsed, he could not do so. He, however, made some explanations with regard to his position, and that he had been mentioned by some as being a probable candidate. He had never said one word detrimental to Mr. Sturton, and would be the last man to do so. He was sorry that he had not been able to do so, but he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Sturton said that it had been arranged that he should speak last. He had great pleasure in introducing Mr. Patterson, the successor of Sir Francis Hincks. (Cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Sturton said that it had been arranged that he should speak last. He had great pleasure in introducing Mr. Patterson, the successor of Sir Francis Hincks. (Cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

They had cut up our own county to suit their purposes.

They had cut up our own county to suit their purposes. We had Erin and Ermosa voting for one man for the Local Legislature and another for the Dominion Parliament. (Hear, Hear.) This was all done in order to suit Mr. Drew, and secure a seat for him. But their friend Col. Higginbotham had beaten him on his own ground, and the Riding of Erin elected him they elected an honest man, who would be true to their interests, to his principles and his party. (Cheers.) How could they have a good Government or a pure Parliament, when they found such men in it as Col. Gray, who not only drew his pay as member, his mileage, but also $800 a month for doing next to nothing, and which, to evade the law, John A. Macdonald had to pay him by the month. These were some of the things they had to complain of, and against these Mr. Sturton had got his face, and for this, if for nothing else, he was again entitled to their support. (Cheers.)

Mr. Wm. Whitehead seconded the nomination. Mr. Melvin said they would all be glad to hear Mr. Charles Clarke, M. P., and therefore nominated that gentleman. Mr. John Holton seconded the nomination. Mr. J. P. McMillan came forward to nominate Col. Higginbotham, but the hour in which the nominations were to be made having elapsed, he could not do so. He, however, made some explanations with regard to his position, and that he had been mentioned by some as being a probable candidate. He had never said one word detrimental to Mr. Sturton, and would be the last man to do so. He was sorry that he had not been able to do so, but he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Sturton said that it had been arranged that he should speak last. He had great pleasure in introducing Mr. Patterson, the successor of Sir Francis Hincks. (Cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)

Mr. Sturton said that it had been arranged that he should speak last. He had great pleasure in introducing Mr. Patterson, the successor of Sir Francis Hincks. (Cheers.)

Mr. Patterson on coming forward was greeted with hearty and prolonged cheers. He thanked them for the high honour they had done him in nominating him to this Riding, but though he was not afraid to enter into the contest in South Brant, well-assured as he was of victory, he was afraid if he took the field here that he would not meet with the same success. He was, therefore, for once disposed to show his feathers, and he did this all the more willingly from the fact that his old and tried and trusty friend Mr. Sturton had been nominated, and was sure to be elected by acclamation. (Hear and cheers.)