in the Time of Jeremiah.

"Men Wanted" was the subject of sermon by Rev. G. W. Howson, at the Askin Street Methodist Church last evening. It was a good sermon. Mr. Howson prefaced his lesson by a reference to the time of Jeremiah, when men were wanted. We were at the twentieth century, he said, and that want was as applicable now as then. He did not know but that the article

If man were to be measured by his strength, or bulk, or physical powers, then he was easily beaten by the lower beasts: if he was to be measured by his intellectuality alone (though that was a higher standard, being human, and the other being animal), then he pointed out the most brilliant men had gone down in the scale of morality. Those were not the kinds of nationality or creed: "He was politic, but what was right, and practiced a right life. Some young men,

That was, the man God the church, the boys preceding, and being led by Edward Noulty, who, assisted by Willie Fitzpatrick, and Austin Lane, carried the banner of the Sacred Heart. The girls followed, Olive Pudney, assisted by Olive Sherlock and Mary O'Leary, carrying the bannner of the Blessed Virgin. Mass was celebrat the workshops, and in business, who ed by Bishop McEvay, assisted by Fathers McKeon and Cherrier, and Holy

He asked them to pray to Almighty God for strength to perform the duties they had imposed upon themselves, and also to pray to the Blessed Virgin to intercede for them. Bishop McEvay then called upon all to make a resolution to abstain from the use or abuse of intoxicating fiquors until they are at least 21 years of age. As the bishop implored the children to keep to their vow, he took occasion to strongly condemn the reating habit.

'It is not so much the drinking of nen meet on the street, and one sudhim that his friend must also be thirsty, and at once they seek a barroom. After that the rest is easy. The bishop lectured parents who allowed their children to run at will, and who imagined that all that was necessary to the raising of a family was to provide them with food and clothes. The parents must remember that they must set their children a good example, as well as feed and clothe them. They should do nothing themselves which would tend to lead the little ones astray, and they should keep the children in at night, and should jealously censor the class of reading matter which was allowed to come into the house.

At the conclusion of the mass, the children were again marched to the school, where they were dismissed In the afternoon they were enrolled in the scapular, and a special vesper which Mr. Fred Jenkins, of Cleveland, sang. The music rendered by the

Eight-Year-Old Edward Fishbein Loses Log as Result of

Seated on the ground, with his left foot mangled, and his face smeared blood, little Edward Fishbein, Jewish boy of 8 years, son of Moses Fishbein, of 87 William street, was found by a colored youth in the yards of the Pere Marquette, between Hill and South streets, late Saturday af-

Accident.

The little fellow was doing his best to remove the stocking on the injured leg, but he was so weak from the shock of the accident that he was un-able to do so. The ambulance was called, but before its arrival two of the railway men made a stretcher of their arms and carried the boy to Victoria Hospital, where the foot was amputated by Drs. H. A. and W. J. Stevenson.

How the accident happened is mystery. A train was made up in the yards, and the Fishbein boy was seen on the siding sometime before it started. The injured lad is deaf and dumb, and it is thought, he was climbing on the cars, and did not hear the whistle, which gave the warning that the train was about to move, and that in attempting to alight, he fell underneath the wheels. At all events he was not struck by the locomotive as he was near the middle of the train when it started. Though terribly injured, the boy did not give way to an outburst of tears until he saw he was being taken to the hospital, instead of to his home. Then he struggled violently with his bearers and cried bitterly.
