Ethics of the Eastern People

Count Vay de Vaya Tells of the Moral State of Empires of Yellow Sea.

Interesting Phases of Metaphysical Side of Dwellers in the Orient.

Few men have covered more of the world while yet young, than has Monseigneur the Right Honorable and Right Reverend Count Vay de Vaya and Lustraveled envoy of his holiness the Pope. who was a guest at the Bishop's Palkod, Apostolic Phothonotary, the much traveled envoy of his holiness the Pope, who was a guest at the Bishop's Palace in this city. He has lately returned from a visit to the Far East, to Korea and Manchuria, where he studied the charitable and religious work carried out by the Roman Catholic church. He found the sad state of the Korean and Manchurian youth, where the struggle for a mere existence causes fathers to slay children, an incentive to project the establishment of orphanages which will furnish asylums for the young Korean or Manchu and train him, that in the end the race may be uplifted.

Sunday morning the Monseigneur preached at St. Andrew's Cathedral, and in the evening lectured on his Far Eastern experiences and his project. A collection was taken up, half of which was devoted to that end and half to local charities.

In conversation with a Colonist reporter, the Reverend Count spoke in an interesting manner of the metaphysical side and spiritual life of the Far Eastern nations. His impressions, resulting from close observation in circumstances, affording exceptional opportunities, picture the situation in a way that will arrest the attention of all interested in the present state of Asia. Summarized, his views show that Manchurias have greater physical than moral advantages; Koreans are in a state of lethargy, but properly trained, give hope of doing well: Chinese are the deepest and most difficult to understand, but show the greatest qualities to resume in the far future—it may be far off yet—the leadership. By the present was little will probably be settled. Training and education could do more than fights or battles for the peace and satisfaction of Far Eastern nations.

The Place of Japan.

Count Vay de Vaya had interesting reflections concerning Japan, where, as in other countries, the moral rather than the material side claimed his interest. He pointed to the present state to the completion of his theological course of seven years. He gave promise of seven years. He gave promise of seven ye reflections concerning Japan, where, as in other countries, the moral rather than the material side claimed his interest. He pointed to the present state of transition being rather exceptional

"It is so difficult," he said, "to realize ow much of our Wesitern civilization is accepted by conviction and how much by the gift of adaptation. In certain ways the progress of Japan is remark-able, but I am afraid that the material advancement has been almost too rapid for the moral development to keep step with it. While some of their leading men fear that there might be danger of a financial crisis in the future, the danger of a possible moral crisis may he even greater."

Although politics is out of the sphere of the Count, ne admitted his belief that the Japanese are poor colonists, and like the majority of travelers, he is of the opinion that their manner of dealing with Korea will be productive of future problems. In Korea he found "a world of its own, a world which seemed centuries behind in Norwania Cart of its own, a world which seemed centuries behind in every respect. In all those Far Eastern countries," he said, "what is even more interesting than the geographical and political features, is the ethnological and metaphysical sides, and the observer must try to obtain knowledge not only about the historical past and present situation, but he should endeavor to get an insight into the mental characteristics and inner life of the people. In judging Korea, for instance, you must remember that it is a country which has been for cenit is a country which has been for cen-turies under foreign sovereignty, a vas-sal state with no policy calling forth statesmanship, a country entirely se-cluded from the outer world, and having Korea's Independence Nominal. granted in 1894, but I am afraid the was nobody to appreciate it or husband it, and Korea, as before, though not officially, has been under the influence of one or other of the neighboring powers. Politics are out of my sphere, and I do not want to go into details, but I was interested in noticing the advantageous position held by Korea, with ports to serve as a main road for all the foreign trade to Eastern Asia. From a com-mercial standpoint she has a marvelous situation. The land is extremely fer-tile, and its mountains are full of gold and silver, and there is a wide field for economical enterprise. The Korean is physically very strong. Centuries of misrule cannot fail to have had the saddest effect on the people, but the natural disposition is willing to improve if they have the opportunity to learn about higer aims and truer ideals. With education the people should prove successful in every respect."

Of all the Eastern Asiatic nations, China is the most "interesting and the Chinese mind the most perplexing" to Count Vay de Vaya. He thinks that as

He went on to say that those who had the widest experience of the country were the different orders belonging to the Roman Catholic church, which had been established in China for three been established in China for three hundred years. In spite of cruelties wrought by savage instincts they could not help admiring many of the qualities of the Chinese, notably a remarkable strength of self-control and even greater strength of endurance.

"At the orphanage and training schools at Si-ke-wei I saw over two thousand boys undergoing training for various occupations such as artisans and skilled workmen," he said. "Others showed promise of becoming clever sculptors and painters, and some of them were studying the classics. Si-ka-wei ought to be visited by everyone who wants to get a better idea of missionary work. It affords an excellent opportunity for observation to those who cannot remain for a lengthened study in order to understand or apprestudy in order to understand or appreciate the yellow race."

On the completion of his theological course he was appointed to the rank of Apostolic Prothonotary, but before settling down he desired to study closely all the different works conducted by his church 'all over the world. The Count was appointed a Monseigneiur before he was ordained a priest, and (this was in 1897) was despatched as a special delegate to the Spanish court, and the same year attached to the papal delegation which attended the Diamond Jubilee of the late Queen Victoria. While in St. Petersburg he interviewed the Czar, and in the Far East interviewed the rulers of China Korsa several rulers.

Cost of Proposed Line

The entire cost of the line is expected to run below $35,000 for building and bridging and about $15,000 per male for the rest of the work, including great terminals on San Francisco bay. Aiready there are oustanding $6,000,000 of bonds issued to build these terminals, and these bonds will be included under the $50,000,000 mortgage. Work is to be rushed on the whole line.

It is expected and hoped that before the end of 1908 the project will begin to earn money as a local line, though the while system will not, of course, be in operation by that time.

the bed. The body was removed to the morgue.

Alexander Anderson, husband of the deceased, said his wife had been drinking since the beginning of last week. She never drank previous to the big fire in which their house was destroyed. Friday morning she complained of a backache and asked him to get her some gin. He drank some of it. His wife had had no food since Thursday. He asked her to eat on Friday evening, but she would not. She seemed askeep when he looked in at her on Friday evening, and he didn't disturb her. He slept on a lounge that night, and on Saturday morning found his wife cold and dead. The doctor had told him of the bruise on her body; he thought she must have fallen. He could not account for the scratches. There had been no disagreement between him and his wife; they did not quarrel. I know that very soon that man will be wanting a new umbrella. There is no surer way of making an umbrella wear out quickly than this habit of carrying it about by its middle. Again, after being out in the rain, you should turn your umbrella upside down and let the water drain off as it stands with the handle downward. By doing this you prevent the water from getting in at the framework and thereby prevent the ribs from rusting. Some men open their umbrellas before they stand them up to dry, but this is a bad plan, because the umbrella may stretch when it is wet. Another thing, too, never roll your umbrella up, as to do so cuts the silk."

London Truth.
From what I hear from a person certainly likely to know what happens at the Russian court, I believe that all the stories of the Czar's depression and despair are false. On the contrary, he follows his usual avocations, and nothing that has transpired seems to have had any effect on his spirits. This only confirms the view that never was a man more unfitted to be the autocrat of an empire. It recalls the tale of Charles II. playing at hunt the slipper with the laddes of his court when the Dutch fleet was blockading the mouth of the Thames.
