DIABBHEA ON THE INCREASE.

Warning From the Provincial Board of Health-Time for Action. The provincial health bulletin for las week is to the following effect : Regarding ern trade with a heavy and needless burbronchitis and consumption we find that the latter has fallen slightly in place, simply from the advance of cholera infantum; while tonsillitis also maintains its previous degree of prevalence, with influenza increasing considerably. Neuralgia and rheumatism seem to pass from week to we well we well and we we well and we well an throuh the summer with a weary and unchanging monotony - to those affected. Much the same may be said of an e nia. Amongst the fevers we are happy to know that no increase is apparent. Refearing to the whole class of diseases of which diarr- canal. hee is the prominent sign, we have them, as was likewise remarked last week, greatly on the increase. Diarrhœsa, which last week represented 10 per cent of all the diseases reported, amounts this week to 13 per cent; chalera infantum, which last week cent; cholera infantum, which last week amounted to 3 per cent, has increased to over 4 per cent; but cholera morbus has rather decreased. Thus we see that actual statistics abundantly support the general call of the public upon municipal authorities to take active measures against the filth which, in many forms, appears to supply the conditions for the prevalence of these diseases. When it is remembered that these diseases most largely affect children, and that, for the 5901 births recorded in the ten cities of O ntario in 1881, there occurred 1485 deaths—ie, a little over 25 per cent of all the children born in the ten cities died within the year—we have an idea of the terribly fatal effects of this class of diseases. Amongst the contagious zymotics, we notice that diphtheria almost retains its previous position; whooping cough has somewhnt decreased, although epidemic

Day in Ireland-Orangemen Thanking The Pope.

Michael Davitt writes from Dublin to the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette: With a few unimportant exceptions, the 12th of July has passed off quietly in Ulster, thereby falsifying those prognostications which led the public to expect an orange Roland for in constant of the public to expect an orange Roland for in constant or i the public to expect an orange Roland for the Oliver of the Monaghan election. To in each bed-room. Prices graduated. those who remember the scenes of bloodshed which marked the recurrence of this anniversary in pro-land-league days, and still is the most elevated and stupendous system blush at the recollection of the brutal savagery which alike disgraced the Irish name and sullied the reputation of a christian country, the subsidence of these sanguinary annual fights between protestants and catholics is a subject of unmixed delight. It olics is a subject of unmixed delight. It marks one more stride in the path of self-control along which our people are marching, steadily but surely, toward national self-government. It is one more convincing argument, for the tribunal of external public opinion, which will ultimately decide between us and England that of external public opinion, which will ultimately decide between us and England that the popular movement by whose aid and teachings this desirable result has been achieved is pursuing a course of political action that foreshadows the prudent and practical character of the rule which its leaders are demanding for the final pacification of a hitherto distracted country. The question of religious toleration and equality settled, and that of social inequality in process of adjustment, what valid objections can be raised against the completion of the work by the solution of the national problem also? To the conclusion arrived at by the Paris Temps of Thursday last all supersjudiced externe opinion on the Irish problem also be applied to the work. A DELAIDE STREET CORNER LOT AND unprejudiced externe opinion on the Irish question must logically arrive. "Are not nations," observes this French writer, "ennations," observes this French writer, "entitled to give themselves the government they prefer? And does not a nationality constitute a nation? The Irish want to form a state by the side of Great Britain. What right has anyone to hinder them?" But this year's celebration of the battle of the Boyne has had an amusing as well as an instructive feature, to those who have read the speeches of the orators. "The pious, glorious, and immortal memory" figured conspicuously, of course, in the mouth of each speaker, as did the usual sentiments of Joyal'y to the queen in each sentiments of loyalty to the queen in each

Instead of formally making a tour of the city the monsignor said he preferred to wander around and see the schools and churches and the press. He also said he would devote a considerable portion of his lectures and sermons in America to agnosticism. "I am always," he said, "deeply touched when, in perusing the high class of periodicals of the day in Europe, to find such a reckless spirit of agnosticism and iconoclastic teaching. I have not yet had an opportunity to review the magazines of America, but I have heard of them, and expect to find nearly the condition of affairs in this country as I do in Europe. It has long been felt that there was not sufficient room resolution; but who among your readers, of Irish Catholic extraction, could anticipate a laulation of his holiness, Pope Leo, from an orange platform, on the 12 h of July in Ireland? Mirabile dictu! Such has been one of the strange results of that unfortunate political document, the papal circular, of Parnell testimonial memory. The Rev. Dr. Craig, a noted orange divine, addressing an exclusively orange audience, in the rotunds, spoke of the pope, not in customary orange figure of speech, as "anti-Christ," or the "Scarlet Lady," but as the "Pontiff of the Seven Hills, from whom
