tract are running more machinery on this class, and report that there is an improved enquiry for both ladies' and men's wear goods made from crossbreds. There can be no doubt, says a correspondent of the Draper's Record, that the prices of the coarser kinds of crossbred colonial wools continue to be very high, when compared with the average prices of recent years, and the dress goods trade, at all events, would be in a much healthier condition if yarn prices could be reduced to the extent of 2d. to 3d. per lb. But there seems little probability of any decline of moment
