While awareness of competitiveness is clustered in an exclusive audience, a growing majority (87%, up 6% since August) believe Canada is falling behind its international competitors and not competing as well as it should be (see Table 7). Albertans (60%) are most aware of the slide, while Atlantic (53%) residents are least aware. There are no meaningful differences among demographic subgroups on this question.

pril 16, 1992