ABOUT THE WATERWORKS, NOW?

Should a man who owns a house neglect painting it till the wood rots? Should he let the brick work weather till it is falling to pieces? Should he allow the shingles to decay and blow away till his ceilings fall in with the rain?

Should a merchant who is doing a good and increasing trade let his stock run down till his shelves have nothing to show but empty boxes, and he has to fake up his window with dummy packages and cases?

If either of these men intends to preserve his property or his trade will be not have to make a big capital outlay one day when necessity compels him? Won't it cost him a proper wad all at once to straighten up his house? Won't stocking up the store swell a bill of goods that will send the credit man down to the commercial agency to see whether it is Co. halt of the Woodbine, Wall-street or high balls?

Toronto has been taking no proper account of her actual requirements for years, and the whole civic edifice needs overhauling? We are short of goods in every department.

Let us see. And if you are in any doubt, go up to the city hall and probe around. The officials are busy, but they will tell you all they know of you are reasonably civil.

Our waterworks system is ten years behind the actual needs of the city. You can't swallow that? You voted $1,000,000 a few months ago to fix it up? That $1,000,000 did not begin to do more than catch up the arrearsages then overdue. Besides, you did not vote the money. Waterworks expenditure does not cost you as a ratepayer one cent. The consumer pays for all he gets.

Another $1,000,000 is wanted to put our waterworks in shape so that the people in the city for the next fifteen years need not be worrying over their water supply, or the merchants living in dread of another nineteenth of April conflagration.

There are 23 factories in the north-west district many like the Dominion Radiator Works, the Canada Foundry, the Peace Foundry Works, employing 400, 500 and 600 hands.

The waterworks department has recommended a twenty-inch main from St. George street west to Dundas street along Van Horne and Royce avenues. There is a 12-inch main now, and it is inadequate. Twelve-inch mains should be laid down every 1000 feet from the 20-inch main, to connect with smaller ones.

In the northern district there are two small pumps, one to supply the territory on top of the hill; the other for the district south to College. A six million gallon pump has been recommended, and a duplicate pump is also needed to make the service efficient. These would cost $50,000 each.

A 20-inch main is required along Arthur street to Roseneaves avenue. There are 17 factories in that district, and the fire chief will tell you there is no pressure, and we are getting in line for a calamity.

The same is true of Parkdale. The four-inch mains there should be converted to six-inch immediately. A by-law ought to be submitted now if the city is not to be caught with its clothes off.

Down east, the 16-inch main to Broadview avenue should be extended to the Woodbine, and a 12-inch main carried beyond.

It is your business to know these facts. What are you going to do about it?

WHERE IS THE OPPOSITION?

The statement in The World's editorial of yesterday, as to an arrangement between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden, leader of the opposition, that another session of parliament would be held before a general election took place, was substantiated in the same issue by a news item in which Mr. Calvert, chief whip of the Liberal party, said that at the late session of the house a pledge was given by the Liberal party to the Conservative leader to the above effect and that it would be respected.

The World would like Mr. Calvert and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden or all or any one of them to say if they are parties to any such compact, and what are the principles underlying such compact, and whether there is any violation of responsible government, and whether it is the prerogative of any man to negotiate away one of the fundamental rights of constitutional government in this country, namely, an appeal to the people at any moment. If such an appeal is considered in the interest of the country by those who are in office and responsible at the moment.

The people of Canada have been very much concerned of late about the dealings between parties and underlings and negotiations and agreements and private interviews or private negotiations in regard to quite a number of things. The leader of the opposition has allowed himself to be created into a kind of cabinet minister under the special patronage of the prime minister for the time being, and the only opposition recognized in the house is the opposition that the government chooses to so recognize and with which it is in negotiation more or less of the time.

We do not know that there is any question more worthy of discussion at the present moment than the new condition of affairs gradually growing up in this country, and resulting in the recognition by the government of an official opposition whose leader is under salary from the government and is more or less in open or secret negotiation with the government that happens to be in power for the day.

AN ARCHITECT OF PUBLIC LIFE.

"It is a great relief," asserted Mr. Pecksniff to Martin Chuzzlewit's feigned rejoicing that poor Tom Zerk had been sent away. "It is a great relief." But having discharged his duty with tolerable fineness—the duty which I owed to society, I will now, my dear sir, if you will give me leave, retire to shed a few tears in the back garden, as an humble individual."

Pecksniff was an architect, but he used to get off the job and deliver himself of unctuous homilies as his duty to society. There are others.

Rev. J. A. Macdonald, as editor of The Globe, and architect of public opinion and public life in Canada, left his job the other day and delivered himself of seven columns of homily before the Halifax Canadian Club.

With a plenitude of platitudes, with a catchiness of phrase, the assumption of the sacerdotal role and an ingenious note of finality he gave public opinion and public life in Canada particularity.

He painted the evils facing Canadian democracy with an impressionist touch; specific instances he disregarded; he daubed in the outline and let it go at that.

Besides sounding the call for young men to engage in some useful public service he said, "The indifference of the many gives the opportunity to the grafter and the corporation of grafters, whose interest is to chloroform public opinion while they secure franchises they ought not to hold and lobby legislation thru parliament that invades public rights. From the careless unconcern of the average elector and the stealthy encroachment of franchise holding private corporations come not a few of the burdens which hamper and handicap citizenship all over the continent."

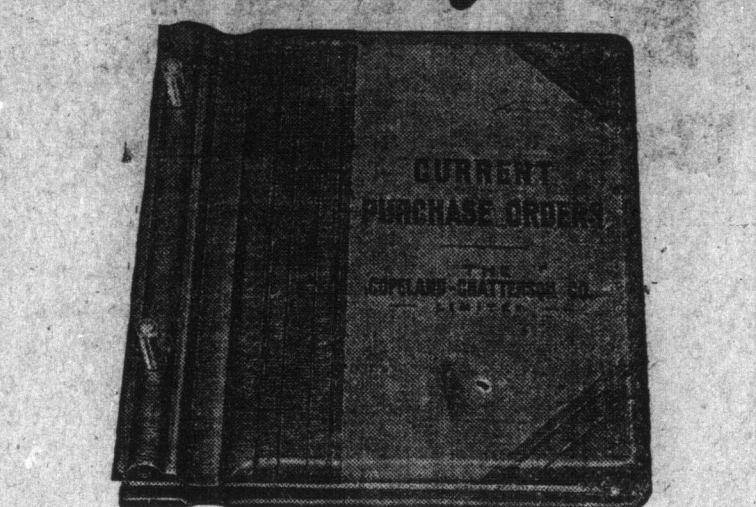

No one who has heard Rev. J. A. Macdonald speak need be told that he is one of the most magnetic talkers in Canada. He has great animal force, a nice appreciation of dramatic effect and can raise a cheer even in the drowsiest corner. But some people think that is not all the needed equipment of a self-appointed architect of public opinion and public life. How does he deal with public questions? Is it not in generalities, in platitudes, in thumping on the surface of things just as he edits The Globe?

If it is permissible to speak harshly, the fairy of the living we would say that Editor Macdonald treats the big public sins that are playing havoc with public rights and public men, with the intoxication of words, the allurement of catchy phrases and a bucket of chloroform.

Occasionally when he discharges "the duty he owed to society," he poses as the high priest of the higher call to public duty; but in his capacity as editor of The Globe, as "an humble individual," he sees public men as public sinners, passing under his eye and within his knowledge, but fails to brand them, fails to do his duty as an honest architect of public life.

Then again, as in Halifax, he do-

Order System

To a wholesale or manufacturing business a good Purchase or Requisition Order System is a real necessity and a good investment.

We have brought all our experience to play in devising this new System of ours. It is being used to-day with great saving success by many concerns, large and small, throughout the Empire. In pithy language, here is what it does for you:

All orders, whether given to a visiting salesman, or sent by mail, of uniform size.

Perpetual separation of "Filled" from "Unfilled" orders.

No going through dead matter to find the live.

All orders filled alphabetically by purchase.

Discourages substitutions.

Direct reference to any particular order, no matter how many orders purchase is executing.

Makes buyer independent of invoices.

Prevents "padding" of orders.

Immediate identification of all boxes, barrels, crates, etc., on arrival.

Advices Receiving Clerk without showing quantities or prices.

Insures accurate count by Receiving Department.

Write for further particulars and prices.

The Copeland-Chatterton Co. Ltd.

Toronto.

announces the franchise-stealers, but as editor of The Globe he is their ready-writer and champion.

Therefore, all this being true, where does Editor Macdonald find himself? As a talker he grips the high ideal, but as an editor, an architect of public opinion and public life, he blinks it. He knows the public sinners and sups with them. In general terms, he denounces the evils they practice, but in every specific episode of their conspiracy to rob the public and debauch representatives and representative institutions, he is their trusty. With side cloak of silence or the pitter-patter of platitudes, he covers the public sinners by his unctuous verbosity but condones their felonies.

Where does he find himself? In a position worse than those men he, physically or morally, fears to denounce. Knowing what he knows, imbued with light and leading, and failing to deliver himself as a man, he stands exposed as a phrase-puffing phoebiform and acented up more putrefaction in public life than any other Canadian, born or unborn.

It is quite evident that time is coming when the public will give him leave to retire to shed a few tears in the back garden as an humble individual."

Mr. Muller's Explanation.

Editor World: Your very flattering description of my new business place might give some of your readers an erroneous idea.

While I have not spared expense or personal labor in fitting up my store, I should not have the impression go abroad that only the expensive or higher-priced cigars are sold in my store.

By making very large purchases of raw materials, by arranging direct purchases from the best known makers of good cigars, I have eliminated all the wasteful costs, and can the better cater for a man's preference for a cigar of medium cost. In all my planning to sell that which is good I have borne in mind that economy is best studied when quality is its partner.

After reading the descriptive article, which appeared in your issue of yesterday, I am moved to this explanation. I want the trade of the gentleman who is acquainted with the royal names of the tobacco kingdom, whether he be a devotee of the higher-priced cigars or an equally ardent lover of the good cigar of lesser cost.

I was glad that you accorded some credit to those who have helped me.

Permit me to thank you again for your generous appreciation of my new store. I have built in the hope that the care and thought which I give to the retaining quality of the cigars may make this store a synonym of thought, and every man who smokes, and I shall give them the same cheerful attention to the most modest cigar as I do to the rare and expensive Corona smoked by the Emperor of Germany.
