The ranks of the 104th remind us all that there are finer things should be filled in a couple of weeks, and will be a silent but unresting monitor, to remind us all that there are finer things than wealth and pleasure and the ability to get and spend.

That is the new birth which has come to Canada. The shock of war, which made men of so many of our boys, and transformed into heroes the unconsidered lads who strolled our streets in the gay and careless abandon of golden youth, has introduced to the world a new Canada, and revealed us to ourselves in a new and nobler aspect. The petty prejudice of class, the petty strife of race and creed, have broken down in the trenches, in the hospitals, in the Red Cross depots, and everywhere save in the narrow souls of some with whom intolerance is the only virtue and hatred the only passion.

A new and nobler Canada turns its face to the morning, sobered and disciplined by the realization of what it means when a nation, forgetting the gods of gain and power and dominion, sets out to accomplish its purpose in the world. The Continent of Europe is a shambles today because Germany, in the arrogance of her pride, turned away from the true sources of a nation's brown of the other day, holding a baby in while the recruiting will be continued; will be continued; will be continued; will be continued to would to fill every much to have the commander of the next unit named, along with some of his officers. Every time we look into the eyes of a mother or a fathcr who has lost a son in this war, or of a young man who has suffered wounds that cripple him, we cannot, if we be men and women worthy of the name, say to ourselves that these things do not concern us; for through their suffering ies in the field and the wounded in the hospitals and the wounded in the we are saved. There are always some hospitals, and the news of the accident to himself was therefore the cause of their right, and the fruits thereof as their heritage; and we have them in Canada today, reaping where they have not sown, and refusing even their portion to the gleaners of the Patriotic Fund; but they are the exception, not the rule. However, Mr. C. thought he would give the old style linings another chance; when the second set of old-fashioned or "Soapstone" linings gave out and the bakery stove linings were still good, it occurred to Mr. C. that "Foley's Stove Linings that Last" would be the right thing for his own stove. He, therefore, placed an order through TELEPHONE M. 1601 "and they lived happily ever after."

Says it Can be Entirely Controlled by Wireless To Travel 200 Maj. W. F. Waltman of Battle Creek, Mich., has just received his commission from the government—fifty years after being mustered out. Miles an Hour

New York, Oct. 30—An aerial wireless controlled torpedo, which could be launched from the top of the Woolwogth tower to smash an enemy ship, its inventor proudly says, is being exhibited at the new Washington market by the National Security League. Hundreds of persons who visited the market paused at the National Defence booth, to study George F. Russell's new "wasp with the sting of death."

Mr. Russel's invention has the approval and confidence of Prof. Herschel C. Parker, of Columbia, who believes that the wireless-controlled torpedo may come to be a valuable factor in national defence plans. The contrivance is a torpedo with wings and double propeiler, one at each end. It is seven feet two inches long, can carry five hundred pounds of powerful explosives, is built to travel at the rate of 200 miles an hour, and can be constructed cheaply.

The inventor asserts that with his wireless apparatus a torpedo could be fired from the top of any very tall building, and accurately directed until it reached its target. The wireless operator directing its flight would be kept in touch with its movement by means of an apparatus which diffuses colored
