Commissioner MacCreedy
Known as Strong "Peace Maker."

Majority for Home Rule Bill
on Second Reading in Commons Looked for — Situation
in Ireland More Serious
— London Papers' Views.

(Canadian Associated Press.)

London, March 29.—The Daily Express says that the government is making a dramatic change in the military control in Ireland by sending over General MacCreedy, commissioner of the metropolitan police, in place of General Shaw. General MacCreedy is known as a strong "peace maker" and has vasty increased powers in Ireland.

The general expectation is that there will be a majority in the commons for the second reading of the home rule bill which begins today. Most of the papers comment editorially upon the prospects of the measure, and on Ireland's condition.

The Times leader runs to three columns, chiefly suggesting amendments of the bill and concluding with profound conviction that the Irish problem is soluble by force of honesty, justice and good will.

The Morning Post can see only one logical and honest course for the unionists, namely, to demand a repeal of the existing act and reject the new measure, but the Chronicle and other journals are sympathetic towards the bill as just and honorable.

Cork, March 29.—A complete investigation of the whereabouts of the police in the night of the murder of Lord Mayor MacCurran has proved that none of them were off their beats or away at their homes at the critical hour, says the government counsel, Mr. Wylie, to the coroner's jury which is conducting an inquiry into the murder. He said that a system of books kept at the barracks showed it to be impossible that the crime was committed by a police officer.

Dublin, March 29.—Laurence Gindell, Nationalist M. P. for the north division of Westmeath, was arrested on Saturday for the second time by the military and police. He was arrested in 1917 for contempt of court and sentenced to six months imprisonment. He served a term at the jail in Dublin.
