FLAGS ADOPTED BY CHINESE REBELS

C. S. Gunn, treasurer of the New York branch of the Young China Association and friend of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, leader of the Chinese uprising, displays two flags, which he says have been adopted by the rebels. One of red, blue and white, he said, was to be the national flag of China, while the other of blue, with a twelve-pointed white sun in the center, as the battle flag of the revolution. In neither flag does the famous dragon appear, and there is not a yellow thread in either of them.

In the red, blue and white flag the field is of red, with the union of blue with a white sun, with twelve rays in the center. The twelve rays represent the twelve two-hour periods into which the Chinese day is divided. The new battle flag is entirely blue, with the exception of the great white sun, also twelve-rayed, in the center. This latter flag is the one that now flies above the revolutionary armies.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCES MORE FREQUENTLY IS PLAN OF AUSTRALIA'S PREMIER

Melbourne, Oct. 26.—(Canadian Press)—Premier Fisher, in appealing for more frequent imperial conferences, said they offered the only reasonable opening for imperial development.

Speeches by Lord Dudley, ex-governor general, are creating much irritation here. Lord Dudley's references to the payment of members and other subjects considered to be quite uncalled for. There is no doubt that the ex-governor general's remarks will result in a number of resignations which constitute attacks on institutions which are established here.
